GALE LASHES COAST BRINGING DEATH TO 28; SHIPS MENACED

By International News Service
The coldest wave of the winter continued to hold Ohio in its clutches today.

Weather observers promised no immediate relief from the near-zero temperatures which yesterday caused numerous fires, many automobile accidents and extreme hardship among the poor.

Requests for fuel, food and clothing swamped charity organizations as the thermometer fell to the lowest point of the winter.

Alliance reported a temperature of four above zero, the coldest in the state, and Akron, Dayton and Washington C. H. had thermometer readings of seven above.

While shoveling snow, Harry J.
Conley, 49, dropped dead near his home in Youngstown. At Canton authorities said Labanna T. Myers, 68, was found frozen to death on the porch of his residence, although it was said he may have died from the effects of a fight.

NEW YORK, March 8.—Ten ships at sea were reported in distress today as an aftermath of the terrific storm which for two days lashed the entire Eastern coast, brought death to twenty-eight persons, paralyzed communications systems and wrought enormous property damage.

Running in circles with a disabled motor in the most unique drama of the sea, 120 miles southeast of Nantucket, the collier H. F.
De Bardeleben wallowed helplessly in heavy seas while her crew of thirty-four men, unable to launch lifeboats, worked desperately to keep their vessel afloat, and appeared to be winning their battle against death.

Six rescue vessels, including the liner Adriatic, two tankers and three coastguard vessels, were in the immediate vicinity of the stricken craft, but were powerless to rescue those on the collier.

Coast guard cutters continued to search for three fishing sloops off the Delaware capes. The boats set out Saturday from Wildwood, N. J.
They were the Winifred M., Winfred Martin and the Native. No sign of them has been found since Monday. Twenty men were aboard.

the schooner Nomis, water-logged

The latter two left Norfolk Sat-

were still unreported.

DENIES MURDER OF WOMAN WHOSE BODY IS FOUND IN TRUNK

Salesman Admits He Shipped Trunk For Mystery Man

PHILADELPHIA, Mar. 8.—While Prosecutor Louis Repetto of Atlantic City claimed today that Louis Fine, 50, a real estate salesman, had made "damaging admissions" in connection with the trunk murder of Mrs. Mattie Schaff, police quoted Fine as denying any knowledge of the slay-ing.

Fine claimed he acted as an innocent intermediary in shipping the trunk, containing Mrs. Schaff's body, from Atlantic City to Philadelphia at the request of a man named "S. Miller," police said.
Fine was under police guard at Atlantic City Hospital where he was taken when he collapsed during questioning by police.

Prosecutor Repetto, voicing the belief that Mrs. Schaff was slain in Atlantic City, said a formal charge of murder would be brought against Fine when he is released from the hospital. A warrant charging murder was sworn out against Fine by S. Cameron Hinkle, assistant prosecutor, last night.

According to police, Fine said that "Miller" paid him $25 to ship the trunk which was delivered to the offices of Mitchell Lichow, a real estate dealer, in Philadelphia.
When Lichow refused to pay the charges, police said Fine told them
"Miller" suggested he take the trunk to the rooming house where it was found. Fine said he had no suspicion of what the trunk contained.

KIDNAPERS HELD

Dowell Hargraves, above, and John DeMarco are held at Warren, O., charged with the kidnapping of 12-year-old James DeJute. The boy was held several days in an alleged garaging near Youngstown. Police found the hide-out and arrested the two men. "Jimmy" was with them, unharmed.

FOUR SLAIN IN JOBLESS RIOT AT FORD PLANT

Police Stand Guard;
Three Face Possible
Murder Charge

DETROIT, March 8.—An augmented force of state police was stationed near the Ford Motor Company plant in Dearborn today as a precaution against possible recurrence of the bloody riot in which four men were killed and more than forty injured.
In the county jail police held eleven alleged participants in the demonstration which developed into a furious battle of bullets, clubs, bricks and rocks at the gates of the Ford plant late yesterday.

Authorities announced that three of the jailed men—Shelly Rogers, Paul James and John Fauth—faced possible murder charges, should investigation indicate they were the instigators of the riot.

Held under arms in the Detroit Armory until nearly midnight last night, a battalion of the National Guard was subject to immediate call today should any emergency arise.

Among the injured, six were suffering from bullet wounds in hospitals and some of these were in critical condition. The remainder of those injured received cuts, bruises, fractures and minor hurts in the fight between police and more than 3,000 "hunger" marchers.

Suffering from severe scalp injuries, Harry H. Bennett, head of the Ford private police, was in the Henry Ford Hospital where Edsel Ford, president of the company, visited him last evening after the riot.

The four who lost their lives in the riot were identified as Joe York, Solomon Levey, Coleman Lenz and Joe Debruske. The first three were said to have been

NOT NUDIST—JUST VICTIM OF ROBBER

ST. LOUIS, Mar. 8.—William Kimball, 23, is no nudist even if he was seen yesterday without clothing while the wind whistled at 10-above-zero tone, he wanted it undoubtedly today.

Extraordinarily thorough robbers, he told police, disrobed him in their search for money, finally obtaining $3 he had hidden in his shoes. His shoes and socks were found a block away from the scene of the holdup.

Fire Fighters Caught By Crash During Serious Blaze

PORTSMOUTH, O., March 8.—Two firemen were reported missing and six others were seriously injured today when a wall collapsed as they were battling a fire in the downtown business district here.

The two missing firemen were feared to have lost their lives under the crush of the falling wall. The six injured firemen were taken to a hospital.

The fire, which was one of the most spectacular in the history of Portsmouth, caused damages estimated at approximately $200,000.
It was believed to have originated in the elevator shaft of the Distel Furniture Co., store—one of the largest retail furniture establishments in the city.

Whipped by a stiff breeze, the flames completely destroyed the furniture store and spread to the Weber Shoe Store and the Brown Derby Lunch Room adjoining.
Firemen were hampered in bringing the blaze under control by freezing temperatures.

The missing firemen were:
David Kehoe, 35, and Virgil Ross,
25.

Those injured in the conflagration were:

Fire Captain Charles Partlow,
Roger Shumate, Harold Kaw, Fire
Captain Jackson Cropper, Clyde Joseph, Clarence Englebrecht.

The injured were taken to the Portsmouth General Hospital, where it was said their injuries ranged from prostration from smoke to fractures.

Witnesses said the firemen were on top of a wall of the burning building when it toppled over.
They were dashed to the bottom of the blazing inferno and covered with debris.

When the blaze was finally placed under control, all the firemen, although many of them were suffering from smoke and cold, started a search through the debris for Ross and Kehoe.

Ross was a member of the fire department at New Boston, O., near here, which was rushed to Portsmouth to help combat the spreading flames. Both he and Kehoe are married and the fathers of small children.

The Lee Hotel, located near the scene of the fire, was temporarily menaced when the flames reached their height, and guests were asked to leave for their own safety.

Telephone operators worked heroically in an exchange building also located dangerously near the fire. The exchange itself was threatened. The Playhouse, a theater owned by Mayor William Gableman, was only saved by a stream of water that was directed on its walls.

PLAN FUNERAL FOR SOUSA ON THURSDAY

WASHINGTON, Mar. 8.—The body of John Philip Sousa, who died Saturday at Reading, Pa., will lie in state at the Marine Barracks from Wednesday at 3 p. m. until Thursday afternoon when burial will be made in the Congressional Cemetery. Sousa won fame as leader of the U. S. Marine band which he conducted for a dozen years at the close of the last century.

A full military funeral has been arranged. The body will be accompanied from the barracks to the cemetery by a naval cortege, including the Marine Band, a naval firing squad and a company each of blue-jackets and marines.

Services will be conducted at the grave by Hiram Masonic Lodge No. 10, of which the great march composer was a member.

Honorary pallbearers will include Maj. Ben H. Fuller, command of the Marine Corps, Rear Admiral William A. Moffett, Brig.
Gen. George Richards, of the marines, and Assistant Secretary of the Navy Ernest Lee Jahncke.

ATTEMPTS DEAL

NEW YORK, Mar. 8.—Reports persisted today that Al Capone was dickering from his cell in the Cook County jail at Chicago, for a reduction of his prison term by the government in case he used his influence in the underworld for the return of the kidnapped baby of Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh.

TWO PILOTS KILLED, THREE OTHERS HURT

ST. LOUIS, March 8.—Two Chicago airplane pilots were killed and three other Chicago pilots were seriously injured today when a Century Air Lines plane crashed near East St.
Louis.

The dead were: Jack Atkinson, 35, and Jack Kirk, 28.
The injured were Sidney Cleveland, Gold Field, Iowa; Ira Smalling, address unknown, and Theodore Gross, address unknown.

At St. Mary's Hospital, where the three injured pilots were taken, they were said to be in a critical condition.

The plane was said to be a training plane of Stinson make.

The crackup occurred near Curtis-Steinberg airport just outside of East St. Louis.

Natives Tell Legends Of Kidnaping Scene

By QUENTIN REYNOLDS

HOPEWELL, N. J., Mar. 8.—Had four customers walked into Gerhardt's restaurant a week ago and demanded service a flustered waitress, unnerved by the unprecedented rush, undoubtedly would have complained that she was being overworked.

Today 150 newspapermen and women jam their way into the one room of the wooden building, demanding food at all hours of the day and night. When a tip comes or a wild rumor in the Lindergh baby hunt shifts through the heavy smoke filled room, there is a concentrated rush for the one telephone, for phones are as scarce in Hopewell as subways are in China.

In addition to the press representatives, a grizzled group of farm hands and trappers maintain a grim watch.

They are resolved not to miss anything and they cock eager ears as men hurl themselves near the phone booth.

Most of them have lived in or near this old Revolutionary War town all their lives, and as they sit, half forgotten, but now remembered in the light of the kidnaping.

"I remember when I was a kid," one bearded trapper told his mates this morning. "I heard the story of Butcher John Hartwell. Do you remember that?"

"You mean Deacon Hartwell?" one of his listeners said, expertly disposing of a stream of tobacco juice.

"Well, he was Deacon Hartwell afterwards," the first speaker said,
"but when he was in George Wash-

THREE INDICTED IN DE JUTE KIDNAPING CASE; SEEK LEADER

Plan Speedy Trials; Man
Who Confesses Part
Is Freed

WARREN, O., Mar. 8.—Speedy execution of the cases against two Youngstown men who were indicted by the Trumbull County grand jury on charges of abducting 12-year-old James De Jute Jr., of Niles, was promised today by Prosecutor G. H. Birrell.

The indicted men, Dowell Hargraves, 31 and John DeMarco, 30 were to be arraigned on the charges late today. Birrell announced that he would seek to try the two together, and set the trial date tentatively for tomorrow morning.

Three indictments were returned by the jury after a day's deliberation in connection with the kidnaping case. Besides the two billiting Hargraves and DeMarco, a
"John Doe" indictment was returned.

Charging "kidnaping with intent to extort money," all three true bills were voted under the Ohio statute which carries a possible life sentence as a penalty.

As the indictments were signed,
a third man surrendered to police, telling the authorities that he was sought in connection with the crime.

Witnesses, however, failed to identify the third man as one of the actual kidnapers, police said, and he was released. Hargraves already has been named as one of the two men who snatched the boy from the street corner, according to authorities. His accomplice is being sought.

The hunted man is believed by police to have been the "brains" of the kidnapping ring. Authorities of Mahoning and Trumbull Counties and a federal agent were engaged in running down clues which may lead to the capture of the ring leader.

DeMarco, it was disclosed, was not in the automobile when it stopped at a Niles street corner alongside the De Jute boy. The kidnap victim identified Hargraves as one of his captors, but said De Marco was not in the machine. De Marco was with Hargraves when the youth was found in an abandoned roadhouse.

TO DEFEND HEALER

MANSFIELD, O., Mar. 8.—The formerly sick who believe they have been cured by the touch of Ed Sorgen, celebrated faith healer, today announced the organization of "a committee for the defense" to assist Sorgen when he goes on trial Thursday, charged with practicing magnetic healing without a license.

REPORT LINDBERGH'S RECEIVE TWO NOTES; CLAIM BABY IS SAFE

Spokesman Refuses To Verify Reports; Underworld Hums As Emissaries Begin Search;
Johnson Still Questioned

NEW YORK, March 8.—Communication was reported established with the enemy today in the week-old Lindbergh baby kidnaping mystery.

Dame Rumor, from the shadows of the childless Lindergh estate at Hopewell, N. J., whispered that two notes, similar in handwriting and construction to the ransom message left by the kidnapers, had been received.

One note, in longhand, received the main attention of experts who were examining it under the microscope to see how closely it lined up with the letters in the ransom missive.

The latest notes, included in several thousand received since Saturday night, were said to have stated that Charles Augustus Lindbergh, Jr., was safe and reiterated the demand for a ransom.

Whether or not these or other promising communications contained a specific rendezvous for the opening of communications was undisclosed.

Neither would the official "spokesman" in the police end of the investigation deny or confirm the receipt of the two latest notes.

"Is it true that handwriting experts have compared and pronounced similar the writing in the original ransom note and one of two notes received Sunday by Col.
Charles A. Lindbergh?" Major Charles Schoeffel, of the New Jersey state police, was asked.

"I have no answer to make,"
said Major Schoeffel.

The major further declared that he had no knowledge that the two letters were supposed to be from the kidnapers because of the handwriting and type of paper used.

Dame rumor, another great mother, even went further.

She whispered that the Lin-derghs had received a telephone call from New York from an attorney who claimed he was representing "someone" ready to negotiate for the return of the baby.

Following the reported telephone call, an automobile from the Lindergh homestead left for the railroad station at Princeton, N. J.

The machine returned with a passenger. The lights burned brightly in the white house on the hill. Dame rumor shouted it was a conference. However, state troopers at the Lindbergh home denied it.

Whether or not hope was around the corner for the imminent homecoming of the stolen 20-month-old infant, it was apparent that Colonel Lindbergh was being permitted by authorities to play a lone hand.

Mother, father and grandmother of the kidnapped babe were opening all letters themselves. Mrs. Dwight W. Morrow, widow of the late senator and mother of the former Anne Morrow, supervised examination of all incoming communications.

Governor A. Harry Moore, of New Jersey confirmed this. He said that the Lindberghs, after opening their mail, only turned over to police what they wished to turn over.

"The kidnapers may have been scared off by the statements that all mail is opened by the police," said the governor. "That is not true. If the kidnapers want to get in touch with the Lindberghs they can do so easily."

Both Governor Moore and Major Schoeffel at Trenton, N. J., expressed their willingness to remove state troopers from the estate if Colonel Lindbergh so wished.

"All we want is to get back the baby," said Governor Moore.

Captain John J. Lamb, in charge of the trooper detail on the estate, said he had orders to do "anything possible to aid the kidnapers in restoring the baby."

A similar "hands-off" policy was adopted by both New Jersey and New York authorities regarding the activities of "Salvy" Spitalo and Irving Blitz of New York, who were appointed official go-betweens by Colonel and Mrs. Lindergh in opening possible negotiations with the abductors.

Both Spitalo and Blitz vanished from the underworld of society. But as a result of their broadcast that "the kid must be delivered," the underworld was humming with activity, with mysterious huddles in hideaways and sequestered back rooms, with sudden departures and abrupt arrivals.

If the job was done by professional kidnapers, the chances for success were good. If performed by amateurs, it was a long gamble.
This was the consensus of underworld opinion from lowly pickpocket to gunman and "torpedoes."
The main police activity, aside from the running down of multitudinous "tips," revolved about the questioning of Henry "Red" Johnson, sailor sweetheart of Betty Gow, nurse of young Lindbergh.

His movements on the night of the kidnapping and the day following were being checked in Englewood, N. J., where he boarded, and in Connecticut, Johnson told police he had cancelled an engagement with Betty Gow on Tuesday, the night of the kidnaping, and left by automobile for Hartford, to visit a brother.

James Bistany, a roadside restaurant proprietor of Norwalk, Conn., was brought down for questioning by police of Newark, N. J., where Johnson is held.

The restaurant owner told a story that a man, a woman and a baby in a green car had stopped at his lunch room to buy some warm milk on Tuesday night.

John Ferrino, a hitch-hiker, of Southport, Conn., told Bridgeport police that a man resembling Johnson had given him a ride in his automobile from the Bronx in New York on Wednesday morning. The man was alone in the machine, the hitch-hiker said.

CHINESE ORGANIZE RESISTANCE AS JAP TRANSPORTS LAND

Report Skirmishes May Develop Into New Battle

SHANGHAI, March 8.—Several more Japanese transports arrived off Woosung late this afternoon and three entered the Whangpoo river and began unloading supplies.

Though skirmishes occurred throughout the day near Lihuo and in the Nantao and Slocaw areas these were only minor encounters.

At 8:10 p. m. (7:10 a. m. Eastern Standard Time), when this dispatch was filed, no important fighting had occurred at any point on the new Sino-Japanese battle front west and northwest of Shanghai.

Several clashes along the western front, however, threatened to develop into a major battle as both Japanese and Chinese military leaders charged their foes with planning big drives.

The Chinese were reported by the Japanese to be moving eastward again on Taisang and Iiwagui, both on the battle line, while both sides admitted a Chinese attack upon Lihuo, twenty-five miles to the north of the Yangtze bank.

To meet still more Japanese reinforcements the Chinese took steps to further organize a nationwide resistance by force.

Over the objection of the Cantonese, who blamed General Chiang Kai-Shek for not aiding the nine-month-old army at crucial times during the past month, the Nanking government appointed the famed military leader commander-in-chief of the Chinese national army, navy, and air forces. This was done by the central executive council at Loyang.

Despite their personal grudge against Chiang, however, the Cantonese were reported ready to back him in this united move for China's protection, and were said to be sending air forces to aid him. The Cantonese have some of the best air equipment in China, and their help was regarded as important.

The Japanese, on the other hand, were accused of pressing their forces still further westward along the Shanghai-Nanking railway.

Japanese officers denied they were attacking, and stated that their only fighting was in defense of their own positions.

Peace negotiations still were reported under way, but they appeared to be no more likely to succeed than have previous conferences.

The coldest wave of the winter continued to hold Ohio in its clutches today.

Weather observers promised no immediate relief from the near-zero temperatures which yesterday caused numerous fires, many automobile accidents and extreme hardship among the poor.

Requests for fuel, food and clothing swamped charity organizations as the thermometer fell to the lowest point of the winter.

Alliance reported a temperature of four above zero, the coldest in the state, and Akron, Dayton and Washington, C. O. had thermometer readings of seven above.

While shoveling snow, Harry J. Conley, 49, dropped dead near his home in Youngstown. At Canton authorities said Labanna T. Myers, 68, was found frozen to death on the porch of his residence, although it was said he may have died from the effects of a fight.

NEW YORK, March 8.—Ten ships at sea were reported in distress today as an aftermath of the terrific storm which for two days lashed the entire Eastern coast, brought death to twenty-eight persons, paralyzed communications systems and wrought enormous property damage.

Running in circles with a disabled rudder in the most unique drama of the sea, 120 miles southeast of Nantucket, the collier H. P. De Bardeleben wallowed helplessly in heavy seas while her crew of thirty-four men, unable to launch lifeboats, worked desperately to keep their vessel afloat, and appeared to be winning their battle against death.

Six rescue vessels, including the liner Adriatic, two tankers and three coastguard vessels, were in the immediate vicinity of the stricken craft, but were powerless to rescue those on the collier.

Coast guard cutters continued to search for three fishing sloops off the Delaware capes. The boats set out Saturday from Wildwood, N. J. They were the Winfred M., Winfred Martin and the Native. No sign of them has been found since Monday. Twenty men were aboard.

Difficulties were also encountered by the Norwegian freighter Verona, which went aground near Sandy Point in Chesapeake Bay.

The schooner Niles, water-logged after trying to pass shoals in that bay, and the tug Mars and the barge Deepwater.

The latter two left Norfolk Saturday for Deepwater, N. J., but were still unreported.

DENIES MURDER OF WOMAN WHOSE BODY IS FOUND IN TRUNK

Mystery Man

PHILADELPHIA, Mar. 8.—While Prosecutor Louis Repetto of Atlantic City claimed today that Louis Fine, 50, a real estate salesman, had made "damaging admissions" in connection with the trunk murder of Mrs. Mattie Schaeff, police quoted Fine as denying any knowledge of the slaying.

Fine claimed he acted as an innocent intermediary in shipping the trunk, containing Mrs. Schaeff's body, from Atlantic City to Philadelphia at the request of a man named "S. Miller," police said. Fine was under police guard at Atlantic City Hospital where he was taken when he collapsed during questioning by police.

Prosecutor Repetto, voicing the belief that Mrs. Schaeff was slain in Atlantic City, said a formal charge of murder would be brought against Fine when he is released from the hospital. A warrant charging murder was sworn out against Fine by S. Cameron Hinkle, assistant prosecutor, last night.

According to police, Fine said that "Miller" paid him $25 to ship the trunk which was delivered to the offices of Mitchell Lichow, a real estate dealer, in Philadelphia. When Lichow refused to pay the charges, police said Fine told them "Miller" suggested he take the trunk to the rooming house where it was found. Fine said he had no suspicion of what the trunk contained.

KIDNAPERS HELD

Dowell Hargraves, above, and John DeMarco are held at Warren, O., charged with the kidnaping of 12-year-old James DeJute. The boy was held several days in an alleged gambling resort near Youngstown. Police found the hide-out and arrested the two men. "Jimmy" was with them, unharmed.

FOUR SLAIN IN JOBLESS RIOT AT FORD PLANT

Police Stand Guard;
Three Face Possible
Murder Charge

DETROIT, March 8.—An augmented force of state police was stationed near the Ford Motor Company plant in Dearborn today as a precaution against possible recurrence of the bloody riot in which four men were killed and more than forty injured.

In the county jail police held eleven alleged participants in the demonstration which developed into a furious battle of bullets, clubs, bricks and rocks at the gates of the Ford plant late yesterday.

Authorities announced that three of the jailed men—Shelly Rogers, Paul James and John Fauth—faced possible murder charges, should investigation indicate they were the instigators of the riot.

Held under arms in the Detroit Army until nearly midnight last night, a battalion of the National Guard was subject to immediate call today should any emergency arise.

Among the injured, six were suffering from bullet wounds in hospitals and some of these were in critical condition. The remainder of those injured received cuts, bruises, fractures and minor hurts in the fight between police and more than 3,000 "hunger" marchers.

Suffering from severe scalp injuries, Harry H. Bennett, head of the Ford private police, was in the Henry Ford Hospital where Edsel Ford, president of the company, visited him last evening after the riot.

The four who lost their lives in the riot were identified as Joe York, Solomon Levey, Coleman Lenz and Joe Debuske. The first three were said to have been

Fire Fighters Caught By Crash During Serious Blaze

PORTSMOUTH, O., March 8.—Two firemen were reported missing and six others were seriously injured today when a wall collapsed as they were battling a fire in the downtown business district here.

The two missing firemen were feared to have lost their lives under the crush of the falling wall. The six injured firemen were taken to a hospital.

The fire, which was one of the most spectacular in the history of Portsmouth, caused damages estimated at approximately $200,000. It was believed to have originated in the elevator shaft of the Distel Furniture Co. store—one of the largest retail furniture establishments in the city.

Whipped by a stiff breeze, the flames completely destroyed the furniture store and spread to the Weber Shoe Store and the Brown Derby Lunch Room adjoining.

Firemen were hampered in bringing the blaze under control by sub-freezing temperatures.

The missing firemen were:

David Kehoe, 35, and Virgil Ross, 25.

Those injured in the conflagration were:

Fire Captain Charles Partlow, Roger Shumate, Harold Kaw, Fire Captain Jackson Cropper, Clyde Joseph, Clarence Englebrecht.

The injured were taken to the Portsmouth General Hospital, where it was said their injuries ranged from prostration from smoke to fractures.

Witnesses said the firemen were on top of a wall of the burning building when it toppled over. They were dashed to the bottom of the blazing inferno and covered with debris.

When the blaze was finally placed under control, all the firemen, although many of them were suffering from smoke and cold, started a search through the debris for Ross and Kehoe.

Ross was a member of the fire department at New Boston, O., near here, which was rushed to Portsmouth to help combat the spreading flames. Both he and Kehoe are married and the fathers of small children.

The Lee Hotel, located near the scene of the fire, was temporarily menaced when the flames reached their height, and guests were asked to leave for their own safety.

Telephone operators worked heroically in an exchange building also located dangerously near the fire. The exchange itself was threatened. The Playhouse, a theater owned by Mayor William Gableman, was only saved by a stream of water that was directed on its walls.

PLAN FUNERAL FOR SOUSA ON THURSDAY

WASHINGTON, Mar. 8.—The body of John Philip Sousa, who died Saturday at Reading, Pa., will lie in state at the Marine Barracks from Wednesday at 3 p. m. until Thursday afternoon when burial will be made in the Congressional Cemetery. Sousa won fame as leader of the U. S. Marine band which he conducted for a dozen years at the close of the last century.

A full military funeral has been arranged. The body will be accompanied from the barracks to the cemetery by a naval cortege, including the Marine Band, a naval firing squad and a company each of blue-jackets and marines.

Services will be conducted at the grave by Hiram Masonic Lodge No. 10, of which the great march composer was a member.

Honorary pallbearers will include Maj. Ben H. Fuller, command of the Marine Corps, Rear Admiral William A. Moffett, Brig. Gen. George Richards, of the marines, and Assistant Secretary of the Navy Ernest Lee Jahneke.

ATTEMPTS DEAL

NEW YORK, Mar. 8.—Reports persisted today that Al Capone was dickered from his cell in the Cook County jail at Chicago, for a reduction of his prison term by the government in case he used his influence in the underworld for the return of the kidnapped baby of Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh.

"I remember when I was a kid," one bearded trapped told his mates this morning. "I heard the story of Butcher John Hartwell. Do you remember that?"

"You mean Deacon Hartwell?" one of his listeners said, expertly disposing of a stream of tobacco juice.

Natives Tell Legends Of Kidnaping Scene

POPEWELL, N. J., Mar. 8.—Had four customers walked into Gerhardt's restaurant a week ago and demanded service a flustered waitress, unnerved by the unprecedented rush, undoubtedly would have complained that she was being overworked.

Today 150 newswomen and women jam their way into the one room of the wooden building, demanding food at all hours of the day and night. When a tip comes or a wild rumor in the Lindbergh baby hunt sifts through the heavy smoke filled room, there is a concentrated rush for the one telephone, for phones are as scarce in Hopewell as subways are in China.

In addition to the press representatives, a grizzled group of farm hands and trappers maintain a grim watch.

They are resolved not to miss anything and they cock eager ears as men hurl themselves near the phone booth.

Most of them have lived in or near this old Revolutionary War town all their lives, and as they sit they talk of the legends of the hills, half forgotten, but now remembered in the light of the kidnaping.

"I remember when I was a kid," one bearded trapped told his mates this morning. "I heard the story of Butcher John Hartwell. Do you remember that?"

THREE INDICTED IN DE JUTE KIDNAPING CASE; SEEK LEADER

Is Freed

WARREN, O., Mar. 8.—Speedy execution of the cases against two Youngstown men who were indicted by the Trumbull County grand jury on charges of abducting 13-year-old James De Jute Jr., of Niles, was promised today by Prosecutor G. H. Birrell.

The indicted men, Dowell Hargraves, 31 and John DeMarco, 30, were to be arraigned on the charges late today. Birrell announced that he would seek to try the two together, and set the trial date tentatively for tomorrow morning.

Three indictments were returned by the jury after a day's deliberation in connection with the kidnaping case. Besides the two bills citing Hargraves and DeMarco, a "John Doe" indictment was returned.

Charging "kidnaping with intent to extort money," all three bills were voted under the Ohio statute which carries a possible life sentence as a penalty.

As the indictments were signed, a third man surrendered to police, telling the authorities that he was sought in connection with the crime.

Witnesses, however, failed to identify the third man as one of the actual kidnapers, police said, and he was released. Hargraves already has been named as one of the two men who snatched the boy from the street corner, according to authorities. His accomplice is being sought.

The hunted man is believed by police to have been the "brains" of the kidnaping ring. Authorities of Mahoning and Trumbull Counties and a federal agent were engaged in running down clues which may lead to the capture of the ring leader.

DeMarco, it was disclosed, was not in the automobile when it stopped at a Niles street corner alongside the De Jute boy. The kidnap victim identified Hargraves as one of his captors, but said DeMarco was with Hargraves when the youth was found in an abandoned roadhouse.

Spokesman Refuses To Verify Reports; Underworld Hums As Emissaries Begin Search; Johnson Still Questioned

NEW YORK, March 8.—Communication was reported established with the enemy today in the week-old Lindbergh baby kidnaping mystery.

Dame Rumor, from the shadows of the childless Lindbergh estate at Hopewell, N. J., whispered that two notes, similar in handwriting and construction to the ransom message left by the kidnapers, had been received.

One note, in longhand, received the main attention of experts who were examining it under the microscope to see how closely it lined up with the letters in the ransom message.

The latest notes, included in several thousand received since Saturday night, were said to have stated that Charles Augustus Lindbergh, Jr., was safe and reiterated the demand for a ransom.

Whether or not these or other promising communications contained a specific rendezvous for the opening of communications was undisclosed.

Neither would the official "spokesman" in the police end of the investigation deny or confirm the receipt of the two latest notes.

"Is it true that handwriting experts have compared and pronounced similar the writing in the original ransom note and one of two notes received Sunday by Col. Charles A. Lindbergh?" Major Charles Schoeffel, of the New Jersey state police, was asked.

"I have no answer to make," said Major Schoeffel.

The major further declared that he had no knowledge that the two letters were supposed to be from the kidnapers because of the handwriting and type of paper used.

Dame rumor, another great mother, even went further.

She whispered that the Lindberghs had received a telephone call from New York from an attorney who claimed he was representing "someone" ready to negotiate for the return of the baby.

Following the reported telephone call, an automobile from the Lindbergh homestead left for the railroad station at Princeton, N. J.

The machine returned with a passenger. The lights burned brightly in the white house on the hill, Dame rumor shouted it was a conference. However, state troopers at the Lindbergh home denied it.

Whether or not hope was around the corner for the imminent homecoming of the stolen 20-month-old infant, it was apparent that Colonel Lindbergh was being permitted by authorities to play a lone hand.

Mother, father and grandmother of the kidnapped babe were opening all matters themselves. Mrs. Dwight W. Morrow, widow of the late senator and mother of the late Anne Morrow, supervised examination of all incoming communications.

Governor A. Harry Moore, of New Jersey, confirmed this. He said that the Lindberghs, after opening their mail, only turned over to police what they wished to turn over.

"The kidnapers may have been scared off by the statements that all mail is opened by the police," said the governor. "That is not true. If the kidnapers want to get in touch with the Lindberghs they can do so easily."

Both Governor Moore and Major Schoeffel at Trenton, N. J., expressed their willingness to remove state troopers from the estate if Colonel Lindbergh so wished.

"All we want is to get back the baby," said Governor Moore.

Captain John J. Lamb, in charge of the trooper detail on the estate, said he had orders to do "anything possible to aid the kidnapers in restoring the baby."

A similar "hands-off" policy was adopted by both New Jersey and New York authorities regarding the activities of "Salvy" Spitaler and Irving Blitz of New York, who were appointed official go-betweens in opening possible negotiations with the abductors.

Both Spitaler and Blitz vanished from the underworld of society. But as a result of their broadcast that "the kid must be delivered," the underworld was humming with activity, with mysterious gatherings in hideaways and sequestered back rooms, with sudden departures and abrupt arrivals.

If the job was done by professional kidnapers, the chances for success were good. If performed by amateurs, it was a long gamble.

This was the consensus of underworld opinion from kowly pick-pocket to gunman and "torpedoes" from the running down of multi-tudinous "tips," revolved about the questioning of Henry "Red" Johnson, sailor sweetheart of Betty Gow, nurse of young Lindbergh.

His movements on the night of the kidnaping and the day following were being checked in Englewood, N. J., where he boarded, and in Connecticut. Johnson told police he had cancelled an engagement at Xenia.

with Betty Gow on Tuesday, the night of the kidnaping, and left by automobile for Hartford, to visit a brother.

James Bistary, a roadside restaurant proprietor of Norwalk, Conn., was brought down for questioning by police of Newark, N. J., where Johnson is held.

The restaurant owner told a story that a man, a woman and a baby in a green car had stopped at his lunch room to buy some warm milk on Tuesday night.

John Ferrino, a hitch-hiker, of Southport, Conn., told Bridgeport police that a man resembling Johnson had given him a ride in his automobile from the Bronx in New York on Wednesday morning. The man was alone in the machine, the hitch-hiker said.

Report Skirmishes May Develop Into New Battle

SHANGHAI, March 8.—Several more Japanese transports arrived off Whangpoo late this afternoon and three entered the Whangpoo River and began unloading supplies.

Though skirmishes occurred throughout the day near Luho and in the Nantao and Sticawee areas these were only minor encounters.

At 8:10 p. m. (7:10 a. m. Eastern Standard Time), when this dispatch was filed, no important fighting had occurred at any point on the new Sino-Japanese battle front west and northwest of Shanghai.

Several clashes along the western front, however, threatened to develop into a major battle as both Japanese and Chinese military leaders charged their foes with planning big drives.

The Chinese were reported by the Japanese to be moving eastward again on Taitsang and Hwagtu, both on the battle line, while both sides admitted a Chinese attack upon Luenho, twenty-five miles to the north of the Yangtze bank.

To meet still more Japanese reinforcements, the Chinese took steps to further organize a nationwide resistance by force.

Over the objection of the Cantonese, who blamed General Chiang Kai-Shek for not aiding the nineteenth route army at crucial times during the past month, the Nanjing government appointed the famed military leader commander-in-chief of the Chinese national army, navy, and air forces.

This was done by the central executive council at Loyang.

Despite their personal grudge against Chiang, however, the Cantonese were reported ready to back him in this united move for China's protection, and were said to be sending air forces to aid him. The Cantonese have some of the best air equipment in China, and their help was regarded as important.

The Japanese, on pressing their forces still further westward along the Shanghai-Nanking railway.

Japanese officers denied they were attacking, and stated that their only fighting was in defense of their own positions.

Peace negotiations still were reported under way, but they appeared to be no more likely to succeed than have previous conferences.

WALDO BAKER BOND DECLARED FORFEIT UNDER COURT ORDER

Forfeiture to the state of the $2,000 appearance bond posted on behalf of Waldo Baker, 43, Arcanum, O., indicted as the sixth member and leader of a robber group charged with having perpetrated the $19,500 robbery at the Charles Monnett home, near Yellow Springs, November 20, was ordered by Common Pleas Judge R. L. Gowdy Monday.

Baker, following his arrest and release on bail, has since remained at large, defying efforts of authorities to locate him for arraignment on the charge on which the grand jury indicted him early in January.

Gertrude E. Coleman, Dayton, and Clarence A. Cook, Xenia, sureties on Baker's recognizance, had been directed by the court to produce the suspect in court by March 7. When Baker did not show up Monday, the specified date, and the bondsmen also failed to appear, Judge Gowdy granted Prosecuting Attorney Marcus McCallister's application that the bond be declared forfeited.

Sheriffs of Greene and Montgomery Counties have been instructed to levy on property of the bondsmen, if necessary, to collect the amount of the $2,000 bond.

WARDEN TO ENFORCE FISHING BAN HERE

Steps to enforce the edict of the state conservation council under which a portion of Ohio waters, including fifty-five miles of streams in Greene County, have been ordered closed to fishing for a two-year period, are about to be taken by E. D. Stroup, Greene County game warden.

Under terms of the decree, Caesars Creek and all its tributaries, including Anderson's Fork and its tributaries in this county, will be closed for the specified period in order that the streams may be restocked and the fish permitted to propagate.

Warden Stroup said that the closed streams will be suitably posted, warning signs being placed at intervals along the banks to advise fishermen of the edict.

HOLLYWOOD SPECULATES OVER 1932 What Type Of Pictures In Demand, Who Will Be Big Box-Office Names Are Problems In Filmland

By RADIE HARRIS
Central Press Correspondent

HOLLYWOOD, March 8.—To Hollywood the past year and the beginning of the new year have been fraught with turmoil... hectic change and more hectic readjustment.

What future will be made, what hopes will be dashed this year? That dear reader, is a rhetorical question that no one can answer until 1933 arrives. In the meantime let us peep into an imaginary crystal and try to foresee what the fates have in store for Uncle Sam's fourth largest industry.

The Vogue for gangster pictures popularized last year by such successes as "Little Caesar" and "The Public Enemy" and "Star Witness" are definitely on the wane as are kid pictures of the "Skippy" and "Sooky" school. Instead, inspired by the box office receipts of "Dracula," "Frankenstein" and Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde, there is a very decided trend toward mystery melodramas.

The newspaper angle, however, has not outlived its popularity as is evidenced by the new crop of pictures dealing with the Fourth Estate, slated for production during the present year.

On the other hand, the ultra-sophisticated drama of the "Strangers May Kiss" genre is giving way to romance, pure and unadulterated.

With Paramount bringing back "The Miracle Man," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer "Her Cardboard Lover" and Warner Bros. "So Big," it seems that revivals of past silent successes may continue indefinitely.

Transposing entire musical comedies to the screen in the "Whoopie" manner won't come into favor again, but pictures featuring occasional musical interludes such as Maurice Chevalier's "One Hour With You" will find always a welcome public.

Neither Charlie Chaplin nor Harold Lloyd has any definite production plans for 1932, so we may have to look to Jimmie Durante, Chic Sale and Laurel and Hardy for our biggest laughs.

So much for the trend in pictures! Now let's "stargaze" at the players and cast a few predictions in their direction!

Without exception every studio in Hollywood has some new face to launch—some new discovery to ballyhoo.

At Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, a studio that always has maintained a policy of boosting its own players, Madge Evans and Karen Morley seem to be the white-headed little girls just now. This same studio has also been fortunate enough to obtain the exclusive service of Helen Hayes, whose magnificent performances in "The Sin of Madelon Claudet" and "Arrowsmith" put her in line for the Academy Acting Award for 1932-1933.

Among the male contingent Robert Young looks the most promising.

Established favorites such as Joan Crawford, Robert Montgomery, Norma Shearer, Clark Gable, Marie Dressler, Marion Davies, Jackie Cooper, Wallace Beery, John and Lionel Barrymore and Greta Garbo will retain their popularity.

Irene Purcell, Marjorie Rambeau, John Mack Brown, Neil Hamilton, Ernest Torrence and Roland Young have been dropped from the contract list. William Haines has been demoted (at his own request), to feature player.

Antia Page, still is among those present.

Paramount has two potential box office bets in Sylvia Sydney and Carole Lombard. Marjorie Hopkins is a newcomer with a rosy future ahead. Tallulah Bankhead, whose amazing personality has been squandered on three bad pictures, if given a break with stories, should be a topnotcher in the Garbo-Dietrich class. Claudette Colbert is another star who has had to contend with unworthy vehicles during 1931. Here's hoping that 1932 brings her another "The Lady Lies!"

Frances Dee and Wynn Gibson are just getting into their stride. Watch these buds blossom! Marlene Dietrich, who recently completed "Shanghai Express" has one picture to make before she returns to Berlin on her annual vacation. Whether she will continue her career in her Vaterland or renew

her contract with Paramount still is problematical.

A newcomer from Europe, Sari Maritza, may become a favorite.

If bad health doesn't interfere, there is no reason why Gary Cooper's popularity should not continue unabated. Other players to whom 1932 should prove no Waterloo are Maurice Chevalier, Lilyan Tashman, Regis Toomey, Richard Arlen, Clive Brook, George Bancroft, Adolph Menjou and Paul Lukas. Among the men, Frederic March is of greatest Paramount importance. With the showing of "The Man I Killed," Phillips Holmes becomes a star in the making. Keep your eye on Gene Raymond, too!

Kay Francis and Ruth Chatterton have transferred their affections to Warner Bros.

Skeets Gallagher, Mary Brian, Jean Arthur, June Colver, Mitzi Green, Barry Norton, Fay Wray, Allen Vincent, Dorothy Tree, Peggy Shannon, Anna May Wong, Marjorie Gateson and Charles "Buddy" Rogers have been dropped from the contract list.

Handicapped by poor pictures, Nancy Carroll has fallen behind, but her fans are hoping that her work in "The Man I Killed," will re-establish her popularity. Jack Oakie also is hoping to regain his former favor this year. He is in several new films.

Warner Bros. is promoting Marian Marsh and Warren William in a big way. Joan Blondell and James Cagney will continue their climb up the ladder. Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., elevated to stardom during 1931, will further distinguish himself. Richard Barthelmess' star shines on undimmed.

Dropped from the contract list were Dorothy Mackall, John Barrymore (who went to Metro for "Grand Hotel"), Dolores Costello, Frank Fay, Winnie Lightner, Shirley Chambers, Anthony Bushnell and William Collier, Jr.

Over at Fox, they will tell you to watch Helen Mack and Weldon Heyburn, two names destined to achieve public acclaim during the next few months. Other newcomers slated for attention are Alexander Kirkland, Barbara Robbins, Ralph Bellamy and Minna Gombel.

It is they who will replace Marguerite Churchill, Fifi Dorsay, Linda Watkins, Virginia Cherrill, Marjorie White, Maureen O'Sullivan, David Rollins, Claire Maynard, George Stone and Hardie Albright who have not had their contracts renewed.

Janet Gaynor and Charles Farrell, if co-starred, should continue to break box office records in their own particular brand of home-spun romance. There will be no stopping Sally Eilers and James Dunn this year. Nor will Warner Baxter, Elissa Landi, Victor McLaglen, Joan Bennett and Will Rogers lose favor with the fans.

Dolores Del Rio, Richard Dix, Dorothy Lee and Joel McCrea.

Why Mary Astor's contract was not renewed is still a mystery here. Arthur Lake and Sue Carol, too, were obliged to choose the nearest exit. And Morgan Galloway, Hugh Herbert and Ivan Lebedeff no longer are among the regulars.

At Universal, Talia Birelli, a foreign import, is announced as the current favorite with a whole crop of newcomers including Tom Brown, Russell Hopton, Nedra Norris, Arietta Duncan and Leon Adams also in the running. Sydney Fox, Genevieve Tobin and Lew Ayres will continue to receive their share of attention. And Boris Karloff is nominated as a worthy successor to the late Lon Chaney.

Columbia has been so busy signing up old favorites—Lupe Velez, Fay Wray, Lily Lee and Dorothy Mackall—that they aren't promoting any new discoveries. Dick Cromwell is still the white-haired boy although since his overnight claim to fame in "Tolable David," he has been relegated to less glorious background.

Barbara Stanwyck, commuting between Columbia and Warner Bros., will continue to hit the box office bull's-eye.

United Artists will have pictures by Mary Pickford and Douglas Fairbanks. The payroll for teachers amounted to $85,200. Three cents of each tax dollar was spent on administration and the remainder as follows: four cents for auxiliary and fixed charges, nine cents for operation of the school plants, one cent for plant maintenance and thirty-eight cents to retire principal and interest on bonds.

WALDO BAKER BOND DECLARED FORFEIT UNDER COURT ORDER

Forfeiture to the state of the $2,000 appearance bond posted on behalf of Waldo Baker, 43, Arcanum, O., indicted as the sixth member and leader of a robber group charged with having perpetrated the $619.50 robbery at the Charles Monnet home, near Yellow Springs, November 20, was ordered by Common Pleas Judge R. L. Gowdy Monday.

Baker, following his arrest and release on bail, has since remained at large, defying efforts of authorities to locate him for arraignment on the charge on which the grand jury indicted him early in January.

Gartrude E. Coleman, Dayton, and Clarence A. Cook, Xenia, sureties on Baker's recognizance, had been directed by the court to produce the suspect in court by March 7. When Baker did not show up Monday, the specified date, and the bondsmen also failed to appear, Judge Gowdy granted Prosecuting Attorney Marcus McCallister's application that the bond be declared forfeited.

Sheriffs of Greene and Montgomery counties have been instructed to levy on property of the bondsmen, if necessary, to collect the amount of the $2,000 bond.

FAREWELL SERVICE FOR REV. LUNSFORD PLANNED ON SUNDAY

The service Sunday evening will be a union service of all churches of the city. Dr. H. B. McElree, president of the Ministerial Association, will also speak.

Upon leaving Xenia the Rev. Mr. Lunsford will become joint supervisor of the Inter-Southern and Missouri State Life Insurance Co., with headquarters in Cincinnati.

WARDEN TO ENFORCE FISHING BAN HERE

Steps to enforce the edict of the state conservation council under which a portion of Ohio waters, including fifty-five miles of streams in Greene County, have been ordered closed to fishing for a two-year period, are about to be taken by E. D. Stroup, Greene County game warden.

Under terms of the decree, Caesars Creek and all its tributaries, including Anderson's Fork and its tributaries, in this county, will be closed for the specified period in order that the streams may be restocked and the fish permitted to propagate.

Warden Stroup said that the closed streams will be suitably posted, warning signs being placed at intervals along the banks to advise fishermen of the edict.

RED CROSS CHAPTER OFFICES ARE MOVED

Offices of Greene County Chapter, American Red Cross, were moved Saturday from 4 W. Market St., Dakin Bldg., to 18 E. Market St., in a room formerly occupied by the Peoples Building and Savings Co. Xenia's free employment bureau will occupy desk space in the same building.

Miss Kathryn Smith is still acting as executive secretary of the Red Cross chapter following the resignation of Miss Emma F. Lyon. A number of applications have been made for the position to William W. Galloway, chairman of the local chapter and chairman of a committee to appoint a new secretary, but the appointment has not yet been made.

HOLLYWOOD SPECULATES OVER 1932

What Type Of Pictures In Demand, Who Will Be Big Box-Office Names Are Problems In Filmland

Central Press Correspondent
HOLLYWOOD, March 8.—To Hollywood the past year and the beginning of the new year have been fraught with turmoil... hectic change and more hectic readjustment.

What future will be made, what hopes will be dashed this year? That dear reader, is a rhetorical question that no one can answer until 1933 arrives. In the meantime let us peep into an imaginary crystal and try to foresee what the fates have in store for Uncle Sam's fourth largest industry.

The Vogue for gangster pictures popularized last year by such successes as "Little Caesar," "The Public Enemy" and "Star Witness" are definitely on the wane as are kid pictures of the "Skippy" and "Sooky" school. Instead, inspired by the box office receipts of "Dracula," "Frankenstein" and Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde, there is a very decided trend toward mystery melodramas.

The newspaper angle, however, has not outlived its popularity as is evidenced by the new crop of pictures dealing with the Fourth Estate, slated for production during the present year.

On the other hand, the ultra-sophisticated drama of the "Strangers May Kiss" genre is giving way to romance, pure and unadulterated.

With Paramount bringing back "The Miracle Man," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "Her Cardboard Lover" and Warner Bros., "So Big," it seems that revivals of past silent successes may continue indefinitely.

Transposing entire musical comedies to the screen in the "Whoopee" manner won't come into favor again, but pictures featuring occasional musical interludes such as Maurice Chevalier's "One Hour With You" will find always a welcome public.

Neither Charlie Chaplin nor Harold Lloyd has any definite production plans for 1932, so we may have to look to Jimmie Durante, Chic Sale and Laurel and Hardy for our biggest laughs.

So much for the trend in pictures! Now let's "star-gaze" at the players and cast a few predictions in their direction!

Without exception every studio in Hollywood has some new face to launch—some new discovery to ballyhoo.

At Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, a studio that always has maintained a policy of boosting its own players, Madge Evans and Karen Morley seem to be the white-headed little girls just now. This same studio has also been fortunate enough to obtain the exclusive service of Helen Hayes, whose magnificent performance in "The Sin of Madelon Claudet" and "Arrowsmith" put her in line for the Academy Acting Award for 1932-1933.

Among the male contingent Robert Young looks the most promising.

Established favorites such as Joan Crawford, Robert Montgomery, Norma Shearer, Clark Gable, Marie Dressler, Marion Davies, Jackie Cooper, Wallace Beery, John and Lionel Barrymore and Greta Garbo will retain their popularity.

Irene Purcell, Marjorie Rambeau, John Mack Brown, Neil Hamilton, Ernest Torrence and Roland Young have been dropped from the contract list. William Haines has been demoted (at his own request), to feature player.

Anita Page, still is among those present.

Paramount has two potential box office bets in Sylvia Sydney and Carole Lombard. Marjorie Hopkins is a newcomer with a rosy future ahead. Tallulah Bankhead, whose amazing personality has been squandered on three bad pictures, if given a break with stories, should be a topnotcher in the Garbo-Dietrich class. Claudette Colbert is another star who has had to contend with unworthy vehicles during 1931. Here's hoping that 1932 brings her another "The Lady Lies!"

Frances Dee and Wynn Gibson are just getting into their stride. Watch these buds blossom! Marlene Dietrich, who recently completed "Shanghai Express" has one picture to make before she returns to Berlin on her annual vacation. Whether she will continue her career in her "Waterland" or renew

her contract with Paramount still is problematical.

A newcomer from Europe, Sari Maritza, may become a favorite.

If bad health doesn't interfere, there is no reason why Gary Cooper's popularity should not continue unabated. Other players to whom 1932 should prove an Waterloo are Maurice Chevalier, Lilyan Tashman, Regis Toomey, Richard Arlen, Clive Brook, George Bancroft, Adolph Menjou and Paul Lukas. Among the men, Frederic March is of greatest Paramount importance. With the showing of "The Man I Killed," Phillips Holmes becomes a star in the making. Keep your eye on Gene Raymond, too!

Kay Francis and Ruth Chatterton have transferred their affections to Warner Bros.

Skeets Gallagher, Mary Brian, Jean Arthur, June Collyer, Mital Green, Barry Norton, Fay Wray, Allen Vincent, Dorothy Tree, Peggy Shannon, Anna May Wong, Marjorie Gatenon and Charles "Buddy" Rogers have been dropped from the contract list.

Handicapped by poor pictures, Nancy Carroll has fallen behind, but her fans are hoping that her work in "The Man I Killed," will re-establish her popularity. Jack Oakie also is hoping to regain his former favor this year. He is in several new films.

Warner Bros. is promoting Mariann Marsh and Warren William in a big way. Joan Blondell and James Cagney will continue their climb up the ladder. Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., elevated to stardom during 1931, will further distinguish himself. Richard Barthelmess' star shines on undimmed.

Dropped from the contract list were Dorothy Mackall, John Barrymore (who went to Metro for "Grand Hotel"), Dolores Costello, Frank Fay, Winnie Lightner, Shirley Chambers, Anthony Bushnell and William Collier, Jr.

Over at Fox, they will tell you to watch Helen Mack and Weldon Heyburn, two names destined to achieve public acclaim during the next few months. Other newcomers slated for attention are Alexander Kirkland, Barbara Robbins, Ralph Bellamy and Minna Gombel.

It is they who will replace Marguerite Churchill, Fifi Dorsay, Linda Watkins, Virginia Cherrill, Marjorie White, Maureen O'Sullivan, David Rollins, Claire Maynard, George Stone and Hardie Albright who have not had their contracts renewed.

James Gaynor and Charles Farrell, if co-starred, should continue to break box office records in their

Are you handi-capped at the office?

To put in a full day's work, you need a full man's strength. A man, half-sick from constipation, has less chance to succeed in today's keen competition.

This insidious condition often causes headaches, loss of energy, sleeplessness. It takes the edge from your working hours.

Laboratory tests show Kellogg's ALL-BRAN supplies "bulk" to exercise the intestines, and Vitamin B to tone the intestinal tract. ALL-BRAN also has iron for the blood.

The "bulk" in ALL-BRAN is similar to that of lettuce. Within the body, it becomes a soft mass, which gently clears the intestines of wastes. How much better than using pills and drugs—so often harmful.

Two tablespoons daily will correct most types of constipation. ALL-BRAN is not habit-forming. If your intestinal trouble is not relieved this way, see your doctor.

Dolores Del Rio, Richard Dix, Dorothy Lee and Joel McCrea. Why Mary Astor's contract was not renewed is still a mystery here. Arthur Lake and Sue Carol, too, were obliged to choose the nearest exit. And Morgan Galloway, Hugh Herbert and Ivan Lebedeff no longer are among the regulars.

At Universal, Talia Birelli, a foreign import, is announced as the current favorite with a whole crop of newcomers including Tom Brown, Russell Hopton, Nedra Brown, Arletta Duncan and Leon Adams also in the running. Sydney Fox, Genevieve Tobin and Lew Ayres will continue to receive their share of attention. And Boris Karloff is nominated as a worthy successor to the late Lon Chaney.

Columbia has been so busy signing up old favorites—Lupe Velez, Fay Wray, Lily Lee and Dorothy Mackall—that they aren't promoting any new discoveries. Dick Cromwell is still the white-haired boy although since his overnight claim to fame in "Tolable David," he has been relegated to less glorious background.

Barbara Stanwyck, commuting between Columbia and Warner Bros., will continue to hit the box office bull's-eye.

United Artists will have pictures by Mary Pickford and Douglas Fairbanks. Eventually Gloria Swanson will return from her prolonged honeymoon trip and Eddie Cantor is coming back from his successful stage tour. Ronald Colman is returning from a long vacation abroad—and undoubtedly will have several successes.

Of course there will be many "dark horses" who will turn up this year to be skyrocketed to overnight fame and fortune just as Sylvia Sydney, Clark Gable and so many others were during the past year.

O. A. HARNESS LEASES E. MAIN ST. BLDG.; TO OPEN BUSINESS

A newly remodelled three-story building on E. Main St., formerly the Hornick Hotel property, owned by the H. E. Schmidt estate, has been leased by Orie A. Harness, this city, who will open a combination cigar store and barber shop in the front room of the first floor Saturday.

Announcement of the transaction was made Tuesday by Ernest H. Schmidt, of the Schmidt Realty and Insurance Agency.

Extensive remodeling work on the building was completed recently by McCurran Bros., contracting firm. An attractive new front of antique marble with aluminum alloy trimmings was constructed.

The floor of the front room, formerly a hotel lobby was lowered three feet to conform with the sidewalk level and the interior has been altered and redecorated. A terrazo floor was installed. Three barber chairs are being installed and an up-to-date barber shop will be operated.

The second and third floors are divided into apartments. There are three living rooms on the second floor, ten rooms on the third floor. Bathroom facilities are provided. A steam heating plant has been installed in the basement. Rooms that will be rented for apartment purposes have been repainted and repaired and the woodwork revarnished.

Mr. Harness formerly operated a cigar store on S. Detroit St. and later on E. Main St. for eight years. He sold the E. Main St. store nearly a year ago to George Smith.

The Harness family was engaged Tuesday in moving from residence property on W. Market St., and will occupy a suite of rooms in the newly remodeled building.

Mr. and Mrs. C. N. Stuckey, left last week for Martinsville, Ind., where they will spend several weeks.

VALIDITY OF HENRY SINZ WILL UPHELD

Validity of the last will of Henry Sinz, former Xenian, was upheld by a jury in the Montgomery County common pleas court Monday. The jury, hearing the will contest case of Mrs. Ella N. ## BROKER ACCUSED OF EMBEZZLEMENT OF $2,900 BY XENIAN

Charged with embezzlement of $2,900 from Mrs. Laura H. Hartley, 498 S. Detroit St., Xenia, widow of M. J. Hartley, who signed two warrants, G. H. Witsman, stock broker, with offices in the Winters Bldg., was arrested Monday in the office of Franklin G. Krehbiel, city prosecutor, in Dayton.

Appearing at the prosecutor's request, Witsman was released on $1,000 bond, pending a hearing assigned for Tuesday before Judge N. M. Hodapp.

The arrest was the alleged outgrowth of a stock transaction. It is claimed that Witsman, commissioned by Mrs. Hartley to purchase a block of well known stock for her, failed to refund the Xenia woman the cash difference between the price he paid for the stocks and the value of several Liberty bonds she had given the broker to finance the purchase.

Witsman, who had purchased the desired stock for his Xenia client, explained that Mrs. Hartley had directed him to buy a quantity of the stocks at a specified figure, and that he had waited a few days instead of making an immediate purchase.

Meanwhile, the market value of the stocks dropped several points, he said, and he was able to purchase them at a price less than Mrs. Hartley had expected to pay. The embezzlement charge is based on Witsman's failure to surrender the cash difference.

That the case is more of a civil than a criminal matter was the declaration made by Attorney William G. Pickrel, retained as counsel by Witsman. Pickrel expressed the belief the case hinges on whether Witsman was acting as Mrs. Hartley's broker or her agent. Witsman resides at 440 Marathon Ave., Dayton.

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

Let your moderation be known unto all men. The Lord is at hand.—Colossians, iv, 5.

NEW ATTITUDE

Andre Tardieu, who has returned from Geneva to complete his Cabinet in Paris appears disposed to adopt a new and more conciliatory attitude toward Germany. Among the signs pointing to a change in that direction are his instructions to the Ambassador of France to Germany to go back to Berlin and seek a workable agreement on reparations and other matters outstanding between the two countries; and the French agreement to extend for three months the $100,000,000 credit given to Germany by an international banking consortium. Apparently Premier Tardieu wishes to ease up on the strongly nationalistic policies of his predecessor, M. Laval, whose mentality was markedly influenced by Poincaré's intransigence.

The journey which M. Tardieu made to the Disarmament Conference in Geneva may have caused him to see a great light. The most disturbing factor in Europe today is the traditional feeling between France and Germany, which in the former country takes the form of fear of aggression, and in the latter that of resentment over French chauvinism following a war in which Germany was beaten not by France, but by the world.

Any "security" for either of these excellent peoples that is not based on the removal of fear and hatred between them will be erected on shifting sands. If Adolf Hitler and his rabid followers in Germany will haul in the horns of their oratory and cease to provoke reprisals in kind from the other side of the Rhine, a better feeling may be engendered along that historic stream, that will pave the way for disarmament and enduring peace.

GOVERNMENT WHEAT

The Senate and House in Washington have voted to release 40,000,000 bushels of wheat now held by the Federal Farm Board to the American Red Cross for distribution among the needy unemployed and for feeding livestock in the Northwestern States. If this disposition is to be made of Farm Board wheat, the American Red Cross is the proper agency to handle it. There will be no politics in the administration of this gift to the people, if the society is in charge of it, and there will be a minimum of waste.

Congress had two motives in taking this wheat off the hands of the Farm Board and giving it to the needy. One was to sustain the latter. The other was to relieve the Government of the embarrassment of further carrying 40,000,000 bushels of wheat on which it has been paying storage at the rate of 18 cents a bushel a year and which, according to Senator Jones, would, at present prices, absorb its own value in less than three years. The wheat Congress is now giving away is part of some 200,000,000 bushels purchased by the Federal Farm Board out of a revolving fund provided by Congress for that purpose. The Board's inability to resell much of the wheat it took off the market in an unsuccessful effort to stabilize prices has caused the fund to cease to revolve. The original cost of this 40,000,000 bushels of wheat and the storage charges on it to date turn out, therefore to be a direct charge on all the taxpayers and an indirect subsidy to a special class of wheat growers.

STOPPING CRIME

Referring to the kidnaping of the Lindbergh baby, one of several hundred kidnapings in the last year, The New York Herald-Tribune says: "We think the truth must be conceded and faced, that the body of desperate criminals which has been recruited in the last decade is winning its battle against society."

Unhappily there is no ground for contradiction of the Herald-Tribune's conclusion. Crime unquestionably has "broadened its scope to include every species of racketeering. Its members ignore not only the police; they try, judge and execute." There is no limit to the effrontery of criminals, no real check on their activities, no law, statutory or moral which they do not sneer at and override.

Geographically, too, the gangsters are extending their operations. At first the metropolitan centers were their strongholds, and the smaller towns and the countryside were beyond their spheres of activity; and being free from depredations, they were inclined to look with a sort of scorn upon the weakness of big cities that failed to defend themselves, on no area is immune from the attentions of the racketeers and gunmen. The whole nation is their hunting ground and they rage over it, robbing, kidnaping, blackmailing and assassinating where they will, levying billions of tribute each year and fighting murderous battles over the loot among themselves.

We have not yet reached a point where we have started building fortified homes and walled towns in order to protect ourselves. Private armies for the protection of life and property are still novelties. But the armored car with armed guards is a commonplace of our financial districts and an ironical commentary on the general insufficiency of modern police protection. The pistol has become as common in the American pocket as the jack knife or key ring and is a piece of furniture in nearly every home.

FUSING CABINET?

The "discovery" that there is no difference between Republicans and Democrats has led to the proposal of a fusion Cabinet in Washington. George Washington tried that. The experience he had with Jefferson and Hamilton at the same table suggests that a fusion Cabinet would soon reveal that the differences between Democrats and Republicans are wider and more fundamental than sometimes appear on the surface. The very nature of the Cabinet in our system of government, where its members are merely advisers to the Chief Magistrate, simply precludes attempting anything so rash as mixing friends with partisan enemies. Anyone who thinks differently can speculate on what would happen if Speaker Garner were mad Secretary of the Treasury or Congressman Byrns Secretary of War under a Republican administration.

MY NEW YORK

By JAMES ASWELL

NEW YORK.—The anti-hoarding campaign is having the odd human-interest repercussions of such national movements. The apple-sellers along the proudly fashionable side streets into Park avenue are putting up placards: "Don't hoard! What's a nickel to YOU?" A haberdashery in the bright light territory exhibits the sign: "Be Patriotic! Spend! We'll sew up the pockets if you want—but you'll need them later if you spend NOW!" Many stores report the recurrence in circulation of those big, old-fashioned bills; I saw one as a decoy in the tip platter of a swanky night club.

And a friend of mine who converted his $100,000 inheritance into gold has changed to Liberty Bonds. He talks like a martyr, but he did it just the same. Finally, I've noticed that those little "Hoarding is Waste" label buttons somebody distributed are quite popular among the ragged denizens of the Bowery Mission Coast.

No man past 50 is quite satisfied with the way people eat today. A banquet now, compared to the Lucullan gorges of the 1890's, is a meager handout. What has become of the courses, once nearly standard, of woodcock, terrapin, plovers and Holland House sherbert, a veteran banquetter was complaining to me the other day. He had just been to a large dinner which boasted only two meat courses.

Then there are the "ghost buildings" of Broadway—structures with floor after floor completely "blind," windows bricked over behind enormous electric signs. The fire laws stipulate no windows when a giant flare of blazing lights are strung across the face of a building. One huge electric ad, recently taken down in the 40's, leaves a facade of solid brick, a sort of tomb—a memorial, may be, to the birth of super-salsamanship!

BABY LINDBERGH OUTRAGE PROMISES AN IMMEDIATE FEDERAL KIDNAPING LAW

By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON.—One result of the Lindbergh kidnaping undoubtedly will be to include kidnaping among federal crimes before the present congressional session ends. Legislation so classifying it already was pending, but without much prospect of passage until the Lindbergh outrage occurred.

Now there is a veritable clamor for its adoption.

The feeling is understandable. Legislators are so infuriated that they want to vote for a law of their own expressive of their horror and indignation. If they recognize such atrocities as state offenses, however, they acknowledge their impotence to act. Hence their urge to federalize them to bring them within range of congressional authority. The original suggestion was to classify as federal kidnapings only those involving the transportation of kidnapped persons across state lines.

Today the majority attitude seems to be to make the offense federal per se, regardless of any question of state boundaries.

Death is the penalty generally demanded.

Bills to this effect have been introduced by Senator Roscoe C. Patterson and Representative John J. Cochran of Missouri, Senator Fredrick Steiwer of Oregon and Representative James M. Mead of New York. Other members of both houses have similar measures to offer.

The obvious peril in this steady growth in the federalization of criminal law is the corresponding growth of a central police power necessitated to make enforcement possible.

It was one of the ideals of the most active portion of the Wickersham commission's personnel.

The plan of the commission to recommend a strong police bureau of countrywide scope under the jurisdiction of the department of justice was upset by the rather abrupt termination of the commission's work due to the election of an unfriendly congress and the consequent uncertainty of continued appropriations to finance it longer.

Nevertheless sentiment in favor of the policing of the entire country from Washington is not dead. On the contrary it is stimulated by the transfer at almost every session of the national legislature of some additional crime from the local to the federal category.

Lawmakers with an acute regard for states' rights normally are opposed to so vigorous a centralization tendency but lend themselves to it under the stress of cases like the Lindbergh affair.

Even with its existing modicum of a police organization the federal government was enabled to bestir itself against the Lindbergh kidnapers through a network of agencies several thousand strong, including the justice department's bureau of investigation, the postoffice inspection service, the prohibition, immigration and customs bureaus, and the border patrol.

No one of course begrudges the employment of all available men for such duty.

Nevertheless the very ease with which a large force was shifted from, for example, the task of liquor law enforcement to the quest for the missing baby was suggestive of the size and elasticity of the corps already at the administration's disposal in an emergency.

Whether or not it is desirable to increase it by the multiplication of crimes to be dealt with henceforward by federal rather than state authority is a question which should be entitled to fuller consideration than it is likely to get when congress is so violently exercised as by the Lindbergh kidnaping.

Budgets For The Entire Family

By MRS. MARY MORTON

WHY A BUDGET?

Planning expenditures with the adults of the family will not develop a material outlook in the children, as you might fear. On the contrary, the person who knows how to handle money wisely spends less time in thinking about money and need worry less about how to make ends meet than the person who has no training in and little knowledge of wise spending.

Not only will a family and its individual members benefit in various ways by keeping a record of family expenditures and developing good habits of spending, but because they have more control over their way of living, because they are living better, the community as a whole is benefited. Of course everyone has responsibilities not only to himself and his immediate family but to society at large, and his actions as a consumer, the manner in which he spends his money, the type of things he buys, the amount of money he saves, all affect the manner in which the people of the country as a whole work and live.

FACTS AND FANCIES

Chief Difficulty

The chief difficulty with a fire-place is usually from improper use of the damper. It is important to keep it open while the fireplace is in use; to avoid blasts of cold air, it's just as important to keep it closed when the fireplace is idle.

How To Use Mustard

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

Anent my instructions concerning the proper way to prepare a mustard foot bath, a correspondent reminds me of some other uses of mustard. It is a pleasure to print them here because mustard can be found in every household and it is valuable to know to how many uses it can be put.

A mustard plaster is one of the remedies most often spoken of for pain or inflammation of any kind. Yet few people use it any more. In rheumatism, pleurisy, cold or pain in the chest, it gives great relief. It is made by mixing a paste of equal parts of mustard and flour and spreading it on the skin over the site of the inflammation or pain. Cover with a piece of flannel. Allow to remain for 15 or 20 minutes. For sensitive skins, the paste should be made of two, three or four parts of flour to one of mustard.

Mustard is a counter-irritant to the skin. When rubbed on the skin it causes a reddening and mobilization of blood to the part. This makes it effective in relieving pain and helping the resolution of underlying inflammation.

The mere application of mustard to the skin causes the blood to increase there. The mustard tub bath is prepared by putting four heaping tablespoonsful of mustard in a cup of cold water and then adding this to the tub of hot water.

It soothes and relaxes. It is one of the best ways of getting a good night's sleep. And for that reason a splendid tonic and remedy for nervous fatigue.

The mustard bath is also excellent for acne and similar postular eruptions on the skin.

For asthma in children the British Medical Journal in February, 1929, recommended it as follows:

"It is well to cover the chest, front and back, with a mustard poultice until the skin is red. This takes about a quarter of an hour. After removing the poultice, grease the skin, and the treatment may be repeated in three or four hours, provided the hyperemia produced has subsided."

As an antidote it can be used for nearly any kind of poisoning. Its effect is to produce vomiting. Unlike other emetics its action is stimulating and not depressing.

So you see, by the exercise of a little ingenuity, you can make a sort of medicine chest out of an ordinary household standby.

Poultice, counter-irritant, pain killer, hypnotic, anti-spasmodic, antiphlogistic agent, all in one—mustard.

MRS. H. A. H.: "I have many warts on the tops of my hands. They grow rapidly and look terrible. Please tell me what to do to get rid of them."

Answer: A remedy which is frequently efficient is to get an ounce bottle of formalin, standard strength, and several times a day touch the warts with the cork which has been moistened by the solution. The X-ray is an almost certain method of getting rid of warts.

Stand By Friends

By MRS. VIRGINIA LEE

People always need friends and loved ones. That is, normal people do. The hermit is not normal. He's a freak.

Now it's easy to be good friends with people when everything's jake, so to speak. When we all have money and can entertain and can all our relatives and other friends approve of one another's friendship.

These be the times to try men's and women's souls, sister, and the more your other friends "knocked" your boy friend, the more staunch you should have been. You should have shown him that even if the whole world was against him, you were for him. That's the spirit.

How can you expect him to keep up heart and come through this depression period with his confidence in himself unimpaired, if you go back on him? He's not the only boy who has lost his job and can't find another.

Get in touch with him—that is if you really love him—and tell him you made a great mistake and you want him to come back to you.

"Dear Virginia Lee: I am a young boy in my last year of 'teens and I like to step out with the girls once in awhile, but they most all use tobacco in some form or drink and I do not do either. I would like to get in company with a girl who Never give names and addresses in the column, son, so the best thing I can tell you is to use your detective powers on the girls at school, or other places and find one for yourself. That will be a nice little job for you.

And don't decide there are none. I know there ARE.

Puzzled: I sympathize with you for not being allowed to take the family car while your friends have that privilege. But, you see, in many places it is not legal for a boy of your age to drive. And as you are not of age, your parents would be responsible for any accidents that happened to the car and would be so held.

Your people are trying to solve the riddle in the best way they can by offering to take you anywhere you want to go. Of course it doesn't solve it for you as no boy wants his parents tagging along wherever he goes. It must be hard on them too.

I think you should be allowed to go with girls and that if it is legal for you to drive you should be trusted to take the car out occasionally, but I don't know how we are going to convert your parents to our way of thinking. Enter into all the school activities as well as you are able. If necessary tell the girl you like about your handicap. The troubles she has has transitory parents too, so can sympathize with you. And consider that you are growing older fast and it won't be long now before you will be allowed to take the car, and the nicer you are about the matter now the sooner, probably, you will be trusted.

Lonesome Lover is 16, her boy friend is 20. She became jealous of his attentions to another girl, but now is sorry. What shall she do, and do I think she is old enough to be in love?

Change Diet

By GLADYS GLAD

There are quite a number of brunettes who have the idea that excessively oily skin is a natural characteristic of the brunette type.

And so they grow resigned to this unattractive skin condition, and do nothing about it—except, perhaps to use powder more frequently and generously in an attempt to cover up that unperturbed shininess.

As a matter of fact, the coloring of the skin or hair has little or nothing to do with the dryness or oiliness of the skin. It's true that the southern, dark-skinned races have more of a tendency to skin oiliness than the northern, light-complexioned folks.

But this is due mainly to their dietary habits and living conditions and not to their dusky coloring.

All of which leads me to say that, although the external treatment of oily skin is most important, this condition also requires internal treatment for its correction. A diet rich in fats, sugars and starches puts burdens on the digestive system that have a detrimental effect on the skin. Excess fats in the diet increase the only secretions of the sebaceous glands. The skin becomes unattractively greasy in aspect. And the pores grow large and coarse in their hopeless effort to expel the fatty excess.

There are different types of oily skin. But it is my opinion that all types would show an improvement if the usual external cleansing and toning treatments were accompanied by a correction of the diet. For the fundamental cause of an oily skin is quite often systematic, is quite often a result of ill-balanced diet, imperfect digestion or incomplete elimination.

Heavy foods, fats, greasy pastries, sweets, rich gravies and sauces, and fried foods are the type that contribute to excessive oiliness of the skin. And the girl who is afflicted with an oily skin should restrain her taste for these foods. In place of them she should eat fresh fruits and vegetables. She should substitute fruit drinks for sodas, sundaes and sweets, if she must eat between meals.

And she should be sure to consume ten glasses of water every day if she wishes to acquire a normally fresh, clear skin.

ANSWERS TO QUERIES

Ears

Dick: Yes, it is possible to have the ears made more shapely by plastic surgery. The cost depends upon the amount of work necessary to correct the defects, and upon the surgeon who performs the operations.

Legs

M. B.: It is indeed possible to enlarge the calves and make the legs more shapely. The exercises in my article on "Care of the Feet and Legs," are most effective for this purpose. They are, unfortunately, too long to print here.

NEW ATTITUDE

Andre Tardieu, who has returned from Geneva to complete his Cabinet in Paris appears disposed to adopt a new and more conciliatory attitude toward Germany. Among the signs pointing to a change in that direction are his instructions to the Ambassador of France to Germany to go back to Berlin and seek a workable agreement on reparations and other matters outstanding between the two countries; and the French agreement to extend for three months the $100,000,000 credit given to Germany by an international banking consortium. Apparently Premier Tardieu wishes to ease up on the strongly nationalistic policies of his predecessor, M. Laval, whose mentality was markedly influenced by Poincaré's intransigence.

The journey which M. Tardieu made to the Disarmament Conference in Geneva may have caused him to see a great light. The most disturbing factor in Europe today is the traditional feeling between France and Germany, which in the former country takes the form of fear of aggression, and in the latter that of resentment over French chauvinism following a war in which Germany was beaten not by France, but by the world.

Any "security" for either of these excellent peoples that is not based on the removal of fear and hatred between them will be erected on shifting sands. If Adolf Hitler and his rabid followers in Germany will haul in the horns of their oratory and cease to provoke reprisals in kind from the other side of the Rhine, a better feeling may be engendered along that historic stream, that will pave the way for disarmament and enduring peace.

GOVERNMENT WHEAT

The Senate and House in Washington have voted to release 40,000,000 bushels of wheat now held by the Federal Farm Board to the American Red Cross for distribution among the needy unemployed and for feeding livestock in the Northwestern States. If this disposition is to be made of Farm Board wheat, the American Red Cross is the proper agency to handle it. There will be no politics in the administration of this gift to the people, if the society is in charge of it, and there will be a minimum of waste.

Congress had two motives in taking this wheat off the hands of the Farm Board and giving it to the needy. One was to sustain the latter. The other was to relieve the Government of the embarrassment of further carrying 40,000,000 bushels of wheat on which it has been paying storage at the rate of 18 cents a bushel a year and which, according to Senator Jones, would, at present prices, absorb its own value in less than three years. No one of course begrudges the employment of all available men for such duty.

Nevertheless the very ease with which a large force was shifted from, for example, the task of liquor law enforcement to the quest for the missing baby was suggestive of the size and elasticity of the corps already at the administration's disposal in an emergency.

Whether or not it is desirable to increase it by the multiplication of crimes to be dealt with henceforward by federal rather than state authority is a question which may be entitled to fuller consideration than it is likely to get when congress is so violently exercised as by the Lindbergh kidnapping.

Budgets For The Entire Family

By MRS. MARY MORTON

WHY A BUDGET?

Planning expenditures with the adults of the family will not develop a material outlook in the children, as you might fear. On the contrary, the person who knows how to handle money wisely spends less time in thinking about money and need worry less about how to make ends meet than the person who has no training in and little knowledge of wise spending.

Not only will a family and its individual members benefit in various ways by keeping a record of family expenditures and developing good habits of spending, but because they have more control over their way of living, because they are living better, the community as a whole is better off. Of course everyone has responsibilities not only to himself and his immediate family but to society at large, and his actions as a consumer, the manner in which he spends his money, the type of things he buys, the amount of money he saves, all affect the manner in which the people of the country as a whole work and live.

FACTS AND FANCIES

Chief Difficulty

The chief difficulty with a fireplace is usually from improper use of the damper. It is important to keep it open while the fireplace is in use; to avoid blasts of cold air, it's just as important to keep it closed when the fireplace is idle.

Factographs

The Phoenixians are credited with the discovery of the relation between the tides of the sea and the motions of the moon.

The earth travels 584,000,000 miles on its annual trip around the sun. That is, approximately 1,601,604 miles a day.

The U. S. naval observatory says the measure of the curvature of the earth is approximately eight inches a mile.

How To Use Mustard

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

Anent my instructions concerning the proper way to prepare a mustard foot bath, a correspondent reminds me of some other uses of mustard. It is a pleasure to print them here because mustard can be found in every household and it is valuable to know to how many uses it can be put.

A mustard plaster is one of the remedies most often spoken of for pain or inflammation of any kind. Yet it is not a plaster. It is a piece of flannel, covered with a paste of mustard and flour and spreading it on the skin over the site of inflammation or pain. Cover with a piece of flannel. Allow to remain for 15 or 20 minutes. For sensitive skins, the paste should be made of two, three or four parts of flour to one of mustard.

Mustard is a counter-irritant to the skin. When rubbed on the skin, it causes a reddening and mobilization of blood to the part. This makes it effective in relieving pain and helping the resolution of underlying inflammation. The mere application of mustard to the skin causes the blood to increase there. The mustard tub bath is prepared by putting four heaping tablespoonsful of mustard in a cup of cold water and then adding this to the tub of hot water.

er. It soothes and relaxes. It is one of the best ways of getting a good night's sleep. And for that reason a splendid tonic and remedy for nervous fatigue. The mustard bath is also excellent for acne and similar postular eruptions on the skin. For asthma in children the British Medical Journal in February, 1929, recommended it as follows: "It is well to cover the chest, front and back, with a mustard poultice until the skin is red. This takes about a quarter of an hour. After removing the poultice, grease the skin, and the treatment may be repeated in three or four hours, provided the hyperemia produced has subsided." As an antidote it can be used for nearly any kind of poisoning. Its effect is to produce vomiting. Unlike other emetics its action is stimulating and not depressing. So you see, by the exercise of a little ingenuity, you can make a mustard chest out of an ordinary household standby. Poultice, counter-irritant, pain killer, hypnotic, anti-spasmodic, antiphlogistic agent, all in one—mustard.

Answer: A remedy which is frequently efficient is to get an ounce bottle of formalin, standard strength, and several times a day touch the warts with the cork which has been moistened by the solution. The X-ray is an almost certain method of getting rid of warts.

Stand By Friends

By MRS. VIRGINIA LEE

People always need friends and loved ones. That is, normal people do. The hermit is not normal. He's a freak.

Now it's easy to be good friends with people when everything's jake, so to speak. When we all have money and can entertain and all our relatives and other friends approve of one another. But the true test of friendship is when a pal is out of luck, when he's broke and outsiders have begun to think he's no good and say so, and, in consequence, he is beginning to suspect himself that he's a failure.

Sib asks me not to print her letter but I want to tell her most emphatically that she did possibly a natural, but certainly a most unkind and disloyal thing in breaking her engagement. Probably never again, Sib, will there be a time in your life when you will have such an opportunity to show just what kind of a girl you are—how true your affection is and how loyal your spirit.

These be the times to try men's—and women's—souls, sister, and the more your other friends "kocked" your boy friend, the more staunch you should have been. You should have shown him that even if the whole world was against him, you were for him. That's the spirit. How can you expect him to keep up heart and come through this depression period with his confidence in himself unimpaired, if you go back on him? He's not the only boy who has lost his job and can't find another.

Get in touch with him—that is if you really love him—and tell him you made a great mistake and you want him to come back to you. "Dear Virginia Lee: I am a young boy in my last year of 'teens and I like to step out with the girls once in awhile, but they most all use tobacco in some form or drink and I do not do either. I would like to get in company with a girl who does not drink or smoke. Could you tell me of one, Miss Lee?" "Nappanee Blue Eyes."

Never give names and addresses in the column, son, so the best thing I can tell you is to use your detective powers on the girls at school, or other places and find one for yourself. That will be a nice little job for you. And don't decide there are none. I know there ARE.

Feeling Blue had a boy friend who took her out several times and then quit speaking along wherever he goes. Give him a friendly "Hello" if you get a chance; otherwise ignore him.

Puzzled: I sympathize with you for not being allowed to take the family car while all your friends have that privilege. But, you see, in many places it is not legal for a boy of your age to drive. And as you're not of age, your parents would be responsible for any accidents that happened to the car and would be so held. Your people are trying to solve the riddle in the best way they can by offering to take you anywhere you want to go. Of course it doesn't solve it for you as no boy wants his parents tagging along wherever he goes. It must be hard on them too.

I think you should be allowed to go with girls and that if it is legal for you to drive you should be trusted to take the car out occasionally, but I don't know how we are going to convert your parents to our way of thinking. Enter into all the school activities as well as you are able. If necessary tell the girl you like about your handicap. She doubts thinks she has tyrannical parents too, so can sympathize with you. And consider that you are growing older fast and it won't be long now before you will be allowed to take the car, and the nicer you are about the matter now the sooner, probably, you will be trusted.

Lonesome Lover is 16, her boy friend is 20. She became jealous of his attentions to another girl, but now is sorry. What shall she do, and do I think she is old enough to be in love?

Change Diet

By GLADYS GLAD

There are quite a number of brunettes who have the idea that characteristic of the brunette type. And so they grow resigned to this unattractive skin condition, and do nothing about it—except, perhaps to use powder frequently and generously in an attempt to cover up that unpretty shininess. As a matter of fact, the coloring of the skin, or the hair has little or nothing to do with the dryness or oiliness of the skin. It's true that the southern, dark-skinned races have more of a tendency to skin oiliness than the northern, light-complexioned folks. But this is due mainly to their dietary habits and living conditions and not to their dusky coloring.

All of which leads me to say that, although the external treatment of an oily skin is most important, this condition also requires internal treatment for its correction. A diet rich in fats, sugars and starches puts burdens on the digestive system that have a detrimental effect on the skin. Excess fats in the diet increase the oiliness of the sebaceous glands. The skin becomes unattractively greasy in aspect. And the pores grow large and coarse in their hopeless effort to expel the fatty excess.

There are different types of oily skin. But it is my opinion that all types would show an improvement if the usual external cleansing and toning treatments were accompanied by a correction of the diet. For the fundamental cause of an oily skin is quite often systemic in nature. It is a result of ill-balanced diet, imperfect digestion or incomplete elimination.

Heavy foods, fats, greasy pastries, sweets, rich gravies and sauces, and fried foods are the type that contribute to excessive oiliness of the skin. And the girl who is afflicted with an oily skin should restrict her taste for these foods. In place of them she should eat fresh fruits and vegetables. She should substitute fruit drinks for sodas, sundaes and sweets, if she must eat between meals.

And she should be sure to consume ten glasses of water every day if she wishes to acquire a normally fresh, clear skin.

ANSWERS TO QUERIES

Ears—Dick: Yes, it is possible to have the ears made more shapely by plastic surgery. The cost depends upon the amount of work necessary to correct the defects, and upon the surgeon who performs the operations.

Legs—M. B.: It is indeed possible to enlarge the calves and make the legs more shapely. The exercises in my article on "Care of the Feet and Legs," are most effective for this purpose. They are, unfortunately, too long to print here.

SPORT SNAP SHOTS FRAMED by Phil

From a financial standpoint, the recent eighteenth annual Greene County Class B basketball tournament, staged at Osborn, was not the success the classic has been in bygone years.

At least, receipts for the two days totaled only $565, whereas last year the tournament grossed more than $1,000, according to Supt. C. A. Devoe, Bowersville, chairman of the committee in charge of the affair.

Attendance averaged around 700 each of the two days and was but slightly less than 1931, when the tournament was held at Xenia Central High School.

Several reasons were advanced in explanation of why the revenue fell off. In the first place, "depression" admission prices prevailed. Only 75 cents was charged for season tickets this year. Abolition of the girls' basketball division meant there were also one less tournament session at which admission could be charged.

Tourney expenses were somewhat lower than recent preceding years and a slight profit will be shown on the venture, Supt. Devoe declares.

Whether the 1933 county tournament will also be held at Bath High School in Osborn will not be decided by the superintendents until later this year.

Supt. Devoe was outspoken in his praise of the facilities accorded the players at the Bath gymnasium. He also said the tourney was well supported by the twin villages of Fairfield and Osborn and the patronage from these communities was gratifying.

In view of these facts it is considered altogether probable the tournament may take place again next year at Osborn. Xenia is also admitted to be a desirable site, though only for its central location.

All of Greene County's five entrants in the Class A and Class B divisions of the state tournament were eliminated in the sectional meets, but Herbert Cummings, Ross High sophomore, is made of sterner stuff and they can't eliminate him from the free throw competition, a side feature of the cage tournaments.

Slight of build and a sub on the Ross team, Cummings is a "foul shooting fool," to use a little slang. Herbert won the county free throw contest, tied for first place in the sectional contest at Wilmington, and this Saturday will go to the district finals at Dayton in quest of additional honors. When it comes to propelling the agate through the net from a distance of seventeen feet, Herbert finds it next to impossible to miss. He muffed only three out of forty throws at Wilmington.

HOME AQUATIC STAR FINISHES FIFTH IN HIGH SCHOOL MEET

Tiring in his effort to keep abreast and match the dizzy early pace set by rival contestants Murray Jones, cadet tank star of the O. S. and S. O. Home aquatic team, finished no better than fifth in the 220-yard free style race in the state high school swimming meet finals staged in the new natatorium of Ohio State University at Columbus Saturday night.

Jones, who won the 220-yard event at the Southern Ohio district meet held at McClinton High School's pool in Greenfield two weeks ago, splashing the distance in two minutes, forty-four seconds without being extended, encountered a keener brand of competition in the state finals.

Entrants of Northern Ohio schools made a clean sweep of the first four places in the 220-yard dash. Strater, of Toledo Scott won the race in the speedy time of two minutes, thirty-three and six-tenths seconds.

The O. S. and S. O. Home has the smallest enrollment of any high schools which sent representatives to the state finals.

DRAWINGS MADE FOR DISTRICT COURT TOURNAMENT AT DAYTON

With eight Class A schools and a like number of Class B quintets, survivors of sectional meets, enrolled in the tournament drawings for the Southwestern Ohio district basketball tournament, to be staged Friday and Saturday at the Dayton fairgrounds coliseum, were conducted Monday night in the offices of Paul Schenck, tournament manager.

The "seeding" system did not prevail in the pairings, coaches of the participating schools frowning upon this method of hand-picking opponents for the first round of play.

The pairings follow:

former employees in the Ford plant. Debuske, a newsboy, was believed to have been an innocent onlooker when a bullet struck him. Attempting to fix responsibility for the battle, police today considered conflicting reports. Although the Ford Company issued no statement regarding the disturbance, officials of the company police service declared Communists inspired the demonstration and the marchers opened the attack. Representatives of the marchers, however, accused the company police of having fired into the crowd and contended the demonstration was to have been orderly.

William Cameron, a company representative, declared that Ford police did not participate in the battle and that the automobile, bearing Chief Bennett, was merely driving to the scene to investigate Bennett's car. It was charged, was attacked with bricks and stones and he was thereupon rushed to the hospital by subordinates.

Among the wounded in the rioting was John Collins, a newspaper photographer, who was shot in the hand. Seven policemen were injured. The rioting began at 10:30 a. m. when a crowd of about 100 men gathered in front of the Ford plant. The crowd was led by a man named "Red" who was shouting "We want work!" and "We want bread!"

moon and the moon beams was streaming down. As he looked a figure came flashing down those moon beams and as it got closer, he saw it had no head. The figure was all in white and it stopped in front of John Hartwell.

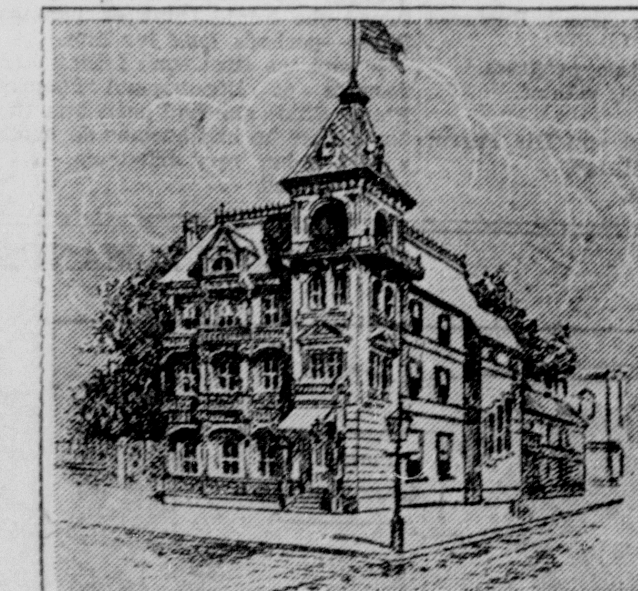

"The Lord is displeased at the work of your right arm," the figure said, "and it reached out and touched John Hartwell on the arm. Immediately the right arm shriveled, and it was there that John got the call. From then on he went around preaching and when he died everyone mourned Deacon John."

"Where did they bury him?" "Just before he died," the speaker said solemnly, "he asked that he be buried on top of the hill, where he had seen the headless ghost. It was on top of a hill—the very hill where the colonel built his bride a white house."

There was silence for a while. One doesn't laugh at these old trappers who live so close to the earth. One doesn't fully believe them either, but they are all part of the picture.

The Olympic Club

WHEN SULLIVAN and Corbett arrived at the Olympic club they tossed for corners. Corbett won the toss and selected the same corner used by World Lightweight Champion Jack McAuliffe and Featherweight Champion George Dixon in the successive defense of their titles a few minutes before. Corbett picked that corner as the winning one. Sullivan was first in the ring, but the challenger appeared soon after.

BOTH PROMOTED AND MARRIED

TWO important bits of information were contained in a telegram received Tuesday morning by Probate Judge S. C. Wright from his son, Sergeant John C. Wright, in the Marine corps since 1917, who returned recently to San Diego, Calif. when the Pacific coast fleet ended its annual maneuvers. Judge Wright learned from the telegram that his son had been promoted to the rank of first sergeant, and that he had also been married Monday night. The telegram was signed "Mabel and John."

ers were delayed by high seas and were due to arrive today, a day or more late.

The fury of the yesterday's gale, accompanied by snowfall, and intense cold, claimed five lives in Maryland by freezing or accidents due to the storm. A similar toll was exacted in Pennsylvania, while a woman and her son were killed near Wauchula, Florida, when the howling wind blew down their home.

From Georgia, seven deaths were reported, from North Carolina, two, and from Arkansas and Tennessee, one in each.

In central Pennsylvania and western Maryland, many towns were isolated by snow and the disruption of lighting, telephone and telegraph systems.

WASHINGTON, March 8.—Seven Atlantic steamships caught in the storm gripping the seaboard, are safely in tow by coast guard vessels headquarters reported here today. Search is being made for the eastern steamship liner Norwalk, unreported since Saturday out of New York for Richmond, Va. The ships and crews taken in tow, include:

San Angelo and Dixie Arrow, off Cape Henry were in tow by the coast guard cutters Seaborg and Potemkin. The Dixie Arrow suffered a disabled steering gear, while the San Angelo was racing handward with a fire in her hold. The fire was extinguished this morning at daylight, according to radio advice.

The cutter Mendota has the Isaac T. Mann in tow to Norfolk. The Mann was caught short with fuel off Hog Island.

The cutter Modoc has left Charleston S. C. to aid the crew of the waterlogged three masted schooner Nomis, off Frying Pan Shoals. The Winifred Ann, Winifred M. Martin and the Native are under tow, about thirty-five miles off Cape May.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Mar. 8.—Virtually isolated from its nearby sources of milk supply, by the worst storm that has struck western New York in years, Rochester today was fighting a serious milk shortage.

Milk dealers may resort to shipping in milk from down state and other centers unless snow-blocked roads in the vicinity are cleared today.

All motor transportation was at a standstill, but railroads were keeping their lines open, although many trains were late. To add to the discomfort, the mercury dipped this morning to 10 degrees above zero, the lowest mark of the winter.

Airplanes from the Leroy Airport were preparing to drop food to thirteen passengers of Buffalo-Rochester buses, marooned since early last night in huge snowdrifts near Bergen.

After an all night battle with the drifts, two state troopers finally reached the buses, one of which was bound for Rochester and the other for Buffalo. Troopers reported that literally hundreds of automobiles were stuck in the drifts in that section.

GRAIN MARKET

SPORT SNAP SHOTS

FRAMED
by Phil

From a financial standpoint, the recent eighteenth annual Greene County Class B basketball tournament, staged at Osborn, was not the success the classic has been in bygone years.

At least, receipts for the two days totaled only $565, whereas last year the tourney grossed more than $1,000, according to Supt. C. A. Devoe, Bowersville, chairman of the committee in charge of the affair.

Attendance averaged around 700 each of the two days and was but slightly less than 1931, when the tournament was held at Xenia Central High School.

Several reasons were advanced in explanation of why the revenue fell off. In the first place, "depression" admission prices prevailed. Only 75 cents was charged for season tickets this year. Abolition of the girls' basketball division meant there were also one less tournament session at which admission could be charged.

Tourney expenses were somewhat lower than recent preceding years and a slight profit will be shown on the venture, Supt. Devoe declares.

Whether the 1933 county tournament will also be held at Bath High School in Osborn will not be decided by the superintendents until later this year.

Supt. Devoe was outspoken in his praise of the facilities accorded the players at the Bath gymnasium. He also said the tourney was well supported by the twin villages of Fairfield and Osborn, the patronage from these communities was gratifying.

In view of these facts it is considered altogether probable the tournament may take place again next year at Osborn. Xenia is also admitted to be a desirable site, though only for its central location.

All of Greene County's five entrants in the Class A and Class B divisions of the state tournament were eliminated in the sectional meets, but Herbert Cummings, Ross High sophomore, is made of sterner stuff and they can't eliminate him from the free throw competition, a side feature of the cage tournaments.

Slight of build and a sub on the Ross team, Cummings is a "foul shooting" to use a little slang. He won the county free throw contest, tied for first place in the sectional contest at Wilmington, and this Saturday will go to the district finals at Dayton in quest of additional honors. When it comes to propelling the agate through the net from a distance of seventeen feet, Herbert finds it next to impossible to miss. He muffed only three out of forty throws at Wilmington.

HOME AQUATIC STAR FINISHES FIFTH IN HIGH SCHOOL MEET

Tiring in his effort to keep abreast and match the dizzy early pace set by rival contestants, Murray Jones, cadet tank star of the O. S. and S. O. Home aquatic team, finished no better than fifth in the 220-yard free style race in the state high school swimming meet finals staged in the new natatorium of Ohio State University at Columbus Saturday night.

Jones, who won the 220-yard event at the Southern Ohio district meet held at McMillan High School's pool in Greenville two weeks ago, splashing the distance in two minutes, forty-four seconds without being extended, encountered a keener brand of competition in the state finals.

Entrants of Northern Ohio schools made a clean sweep of the first four places in the 220-yard dash. Strater, of Toledo Scott won the race in the speedy time of two minutes, thirty-three and sixteenth seconds.

The O. S. and S. O. Home has the smallest enrollment of any high schools which sent representatives to the state finals.

Bowling

Famous Autos climbed back to within one game of second place by winning two out of three games from the Schmidt Oil Co., present occupants of second place, in a league match Monday night. The Famous bowlers combined scores of 991, 947 and 896 for a three-game total of 2,834, as compared with a 2,727 total for the Schmidt quintet. "Batter" Peterson had a series of 631, followed by Horner with a 600 series for the winners. Lawrence Wagner topped the Schmidt team with 578. Box score: Famous Autos.

DRAWINGS MADE FOR DISTRICT COURT TOURNAMENT AT DAYTON

With eight Class A schools and a like number of Class B quintets, survivors of sectional meets, enrolled in the tourney, drawings for the Southwestern Ohio district basketball tournament, to be staged Friday and Saturday at the Dayton Fairgrounds coliseum, were conducted Monday night in the offices of Paul Schenck, tournament manager.

The "seeding" system did not prevail in the pairings, coaches of the participating schools frowning upon this method of hand-picking opponents for the first round of play.

The pairings follow:

CLASS A—Friday, 2 p. m.—Cincinnati Roger Bacon vs. Dayton

Stivers; 4 p. m.—Springfield vs. Dayton Chaminade; 7 p. m.—Greenville vs. Cincinnati Norwood; 9 p. m.—Hamilton vs. Wilmington. Saturday, 2 p. m.—winner Roger Bacon-Stivers vs. winner Springfield-Chaminade; 4 p. m.—winner Greenville-Norwood vs. winner Hamilton-Wilmington; 9 p. m.—finals.

CLASS B—Friday, 1 p. m.—Westville vs. West Chester; 3 p. m.—Lawrenceville vs. Jefferson Twp.; 5 p. m.—Jackson Twp. vs. Dayton Fairmont; 8 p. m.—Wayne Twp. vs. St. Bernard, Saturday, 1 p. m.—winner Westville-West Chester vs. winner Lawrenceville-Jefferson; 3 p. m.—winner Jackson-Fairmont vs. winner Wayne St. Bernard; 8 p. m.—finals.

When the question of seeding came up for consideration, a tie vote of 4 to 4 resulted in the Class A division. Springfield, Greenville, Stivers and Chaminade voted against seeding. Norwood, Hamilton, Wilmington and Roger Bacon, the four surviving schools representing the Cincinnati district, voted in favor of seeding. In the Class B division the vote was 5 to 3 against seeding.

One Class A and one Class B team will qualify in the district tourney for the state finals at Columbus, March 18 and 19.

Three officials named to referee the tournament games are Boyd Chambers of Cincinnati, E. J. Seibald of Middletown and Harry Schwab of Dayton.

Mr. Middleton is survived by a son, John A. Middleton, Wilmington Pike, and a daughter, Mrs. McDonald, at whose home he died. Five grandchildren and three great grandchildren also survive besides a sister, Mrs. James Ireland, Jamestown. His wife, who was his life-long companion, died in 1924.

Mr. Middleton was a member of the First Reformed Church where funeral services will be held Thursday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Short services will be held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. McDonald at 1:30 o'clock. Burial will be made in Woodland Cemetery.

Thirty-seven members of the club are employed in offices as bookkeepers, typists and clerks while second in the list of professions is school teachers, the club having thirteen in this profession on its roster. The nursing profession is third with six nurses in the club.

East High School basketballers, who were defeated, 12 to 10, by Lockland Hi-Y cagers in an overtime contest Saturday night on the Lockland floor, will play a return game with this team Wednesday night at East High gymnasium.

East's quintet, with the home floor advantage, is confident of avenging the Saturday night defeat which was only its second loss of the current season.

Slight damage resulted when a portion of the roof of the one story frame house, owned and occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Roy Black, E. Franklin St., Bellbrook, was burned off Tuesday morning at 7:30 o'clock. It is thought the blaze started from sparks from the chimney. The loss is covered by insurance.

When Sullivan and Corbett arrived at the Olympic club they tossed for corners. Corbett won the toss and selected the same corner used by World Lightweight Champion Jack McAuliffe and Featherweight Champion George Dixon in the successive defense of their titles a few minutes before. Corbett picked that corner as the winning one. Sullivan was first in the ring, but the challenger appeared soon after.

BOTH PROMOTED AND MARRIED

TWO important bits of information were contained in a telegram received Tuesday morning by Probate Judge S. C. Wright from his son, Sergeant John C. Wright, in the Marine corps since 1917, who returned recently to San Diego, Calif. when the Pacific coast fleet ended its annual maneuvers. Judge Wright learned from the telegram that his son had been promoted to the rank of first sergeant, and that he had also been married Monday night. The telegram was signed "Mabel and John."

ers were delayed by high seas and were due to arrive today, a day or more late.

All along the coast, yachts and small boats were torn from their anchorages and tossed on the beaches.

The fury of the yesterday's gale, accompanied by snowfall, and intense cold, claimed five lives in Maryland by freezing or accidents due to the storm. A similar toll was exacted in Pennsylvania, while a woman and her son were killed near Wauchula, Florida, when the howling wind blew down their home.

From Georgia, seven deaths were reported, from North Carolina, two, and from Arkansas and Tennessee, one in each.

In central Pennsylvania and western Maryland, many towns were isolated by snow and the disruption of lighting, telephone and telegraph systems.

The cutter Mendota has the Isaac T. Mann in tow to Norfolk. The Mann was caught short with fuel off Hog Island.

The cutter Modoc has left Charleston S. C., to aid the crew of the waterlogged three masted schooner Nomis, off Frying Pan Shoals. The Winifred Ann, Winifred M. Martin and the Native are under tow, about thirty-five miles off Cape May.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Mar. 8.—Virtually isolated from its nearby sources of milk supply, by the worst storm that has struck western New York in years, Rochester today was fighting a serious milk shortage.

Milk dealers may resort to shipping in milk from down state and other centers unless snow-blocked roads in the vicinity are cleared today.

All motor transportation was at a standstill, but railroads were keeping their lines open, although many trains were late. To add to the discomfort, the mercury dipped this morning to 10 degrees above zero, the lowest mark of the winter.

Airplanes from the Leroy Airport were preparing to drop food to thirteen passengers of Buffalo Rochester buses, marooned since early last night in huge snowdrifts near Bergen.

After an all night battle with the drifts, two state troopers finally reached the buses, one of which was bound for Rochester and the other for Buffalo. Troopers reported that literally hundreds of automobiles were stuck in the drifts in that section.

The identification tended to bear out the story told by Johnson. Fernino said that after Johnson had talked about the kidnapping he had copied the number of the license plates on the machine after he left him.

Two Newark detectives searched the rooms of Johnson in Englewood.

Johnson has no charge lodged against him and was described by police as "a voluntary witness." He has been held incommunicado since being taken into custody in Hartford at 7 p. m. last Friday.

Wanted—Love! The Story of an Unemployed Girl

His face was pressed against her hair.

READ THIS FIRST:

Lillian Abbott, 18-year-old sub-deb, raised in severe New England atmosphere, decides she wants a career and answers an ad in a New York paper calling for girls to be trained for the movies. She secures a personal interview with Thomas Blane, head of the movie school company, at her home in Salem, Mass., and arranges to go with him to New York without notifying her parents and after drawing her savings, $2,000, from the bank. They arrive in New York and Blane takes her to an obscure hotel and enters her room with her. Lillian removes her coat, hat and gloves, and Blane, seeing a diamond on her finger, takes it for safekeeping. Then he attempts to give her a drink from his flask. Lillian refuses. From the window she can see the electric signs being turned on in the streets and is wondering where her career will take her when she turns and finds Blane close behind her, his arms outstretched.

(NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY)

CHAPTER 9

It was now late afternoon. The electric signs about the narrow street were beginning to flicker in many colors. Lillian went to the window and looked out across roof tops and down into the canyon at the bottom of which was a caravan of automobiles.

When she turned Blane was close beside her. It was as if he started when she turned. Then he held out his arms.

A radio was playing. The tune was right in the room. It had been turned on by clicking a little switch on the wall—just as you would the electric light switch. Blane had turned it on... and it played very softly.

It was a familiar tune. A waltz. Blane held out his arms to Lillian. At first when she turned and saw him beside her with his arms open he frightened her. She had been dreaming out of the window.

It was the first time she had seen the electric lights come to life in New York... seen twilight become Manhattan sunlight.

At first she backed away from him—then she realized he wanted her to dance.

Blane noticed that there was a sort of melting tenderness in her blue-black eyes.

He found her slender waist. His long arm enwrapped it. They swayed together in the twilight of the room.

Lillian was a little maddened with the romantic adventure.

Here she was in the arms of the most fascinating man she ever had known. Well, she really did not know him. She only had seen him for the first time less than twenty-four hours ago...

But now she was in his arms... gliding to the loveliest tune... He held her close, tenderly. His face was pressed against her hair.

She liked the warmth of him. He was so tall, so big. He was so sophisticated. He was so suave. He was all the things that she thought a man should be. He was a man of the world.

An appealing odor, a blend of tobacco and liquor and of tweed. Always, she thought, when she thought of tobacco, liquor and tweed she would think of Thomas Blane—perhaps long after she had thought of life beyond Thomas Blane. Since she had seen him the day before he had become so much a part of her very existence.

She sighed.

He swayed a little when he went over to the radio switch and clicked it off.

Maybe this was the spirit of New York. No, she thought, this is a little taste of real life... and a taste she never would have known had she stayed home.

Blane was there by her side. He was looking down at her, as if he wanted to take her into his arms. Lillian watched him in the mirror. He turned and met her eyes in the mirror.

He was looking at her with a queer flicker in his eyes. Lillian turned to the window again.

His arm closed about her a little more. The radio played a little faster... it changed from the dreamy waltz to a peppy tune... some screechy girl started singing.

Blane took his arms from around her and said: "My God!"

He swayed a little when he went over to the radio switch and clicked it off.

Lillian's face burned. The thrill of the dance burned her face... made her hair a mass of soft wire, which clung about her fingers as she turned to the bureau to pat it in place with her trembling hands.

Her eyes were very bright. They were filled with something Lillian had not seen in their blue-black depths before.

Maybe this was the spirit of New York. No, she thought, this is a little taste of real life... and a taste she never would have known had she stayed home.

Blane was there by her side. He was looking down at her, as if he wanted to take her into his arms. Lillian watched him in the mirror. He turned and met her eyes in the mirror.

He was looking at her with a queer flicker in his eyes. Lillian turned to the window again.

"Blane—let's go out—I want to walk along Broadway. I've never been on Broadway at night..."

He followed her to the window. He caught her hand. He said: "Tell me something—have you ever had a sweetheart?"

Lillian was surprised: "Why, Blane—after what I told you on the train... I told you I didn't."

"Oh—I know. I mean, I mean—have you ever been in love?"

"In love? Why—no, I don't think I really have—ever."

He crushed her hand. He lifted it to his lips, and he turned the palm to his mouth.

That was one thing she must not be with Blane—sentimental. She said: "Blane—you make me feel as if I were on the stage—already."

He lifted his face. He was flushed and his eyes were a little heavy. There was that queer flicker in his eyes again—it was a sort of mocking amusement.

"Are you making fun of me?" he asked.

"Oh, Blane—"

"Why are you laughing?"

"I'm not—laughing."

"You are—listen to you!"

"He dropped her hand."

She pushed back against the facing of the window.

"Oh, didn't mean to be laughing—at you. I—meant to tell you that when you did that—you know, when you kissed my hand I felt as if I might be—be Norma Talmadge, sure enough."

She tried to be light, she smiled. He didn't.

It seemed that her manner affected him unpleasantly. She was so awed by him she did not know just what to do or say just then.

"Look here, Lillian," he said. "This—you and I—do you care... do you feel you could care—for me?"

"She could not believe her ears. Could it be, that so suddenly he thought he cared for her... After all, it hadn't been just one-sided, this peculiar feeling she had about him... had ever since he sat there by the fire in her house and talked... and looked at her so... had said he had plans for her... plans for her happiness..."

Wanted—Love! The Story of an Unemployed Girl

His face was pressed against her hair.

READ THIS FIRST:

Lillian Abbott, 18-year-old sub-deb, raised in severe New England atmosphere, decides she wants a career and answers an ad in a New York paper calling for girls to be trained for the movies. She secures a personal interview with Thomas Blane, head of the movie school company, at her home in Salem, Mass., and arranges to go with him to New York without notifying her parents and after drawing her savings, $2,000, from the bank. They arrive in New York and Blane takes her to an obscure hotel and enters her room with her. Lillian removes her coat, hat and gloves, and Blane, seeing a diamond on her finger, takes it for safekeeping. Then he attempts to give her a drink from his flask. Lillian refuses. From the window she can see the electric signs being turned on in the streets and is wondering where her career will take her when she turns and finds Blane close behind her, his arms outstretched.

(NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY)

CHAPTER 2

It was now late afternoon. The electric signs about the narrow street were beginning to flicker in many colors. Lillian went to the window and looked out across roof tops and down into the canyon at the bottom of which was a caravan of automobiles.

When she turned Blane was close beside her. It was as if he started when she turned. Then he held out his arms—

A radio was playing. The tune was right in the very room. It had been turned on by clicking a little switch on the wall—just as you would the electric light switch.

Blane had turned it on... and it played very softly.

It was a familiar tune. A waltz. Blane held out his arms to Lillian. At first when she turned and saw him beside her with his arms open he frightened her. She had been dreaming out of the window of the electric lights.

It was the first time she had seen the electric lights come to life in New York... seen twilight become Manhattan sunlight.

At first she backed away from him—then she realized he wanted her to dance.

Blane noticed that there was a sort of melting tenderness in her blue black eyes.

Lillian felt a thrill run through her body like a lightning bolt when he held her in his arms and swayed to the easy rhythm.

He found her slender waist. His long arm enveloped it. They swayed together in the twilight of the room.

Lillian was a little maddened with the romantic adventure.

Here she was in the arms of the most fascinating man she ever had known. Well, she really did not know him. She only had seen him for the first time less than twenty-four hours ago.

But now she was in his arms... gliding to the loveliest tune... He held her close, tenderly. His face was pressed against her hair.

She liked the warmth of him. He was so tall, so big. He was so sophisticated. He was so suave. He was all the things that she thought a man should be. He was a man of the world.

An appealing odor, a blend of tobacco and liquor and of tweed. Always, she thought, when she thought of tobacco, liquor and tweed she would think of Thomas Blane—perhaps long for him.

It was the first time Lillian had thought of life beyond Thomas Blane. Since she had seen him the day before he had become so much a part of her very existence. She sighed.

His arm closed about her a little more. The radio played a little faster... it changed from the dreamy waltz to a peppy tune... some screechy girl started singing.

Blane took his arms from around her and said: "My God!"

He swayed a little when he went over to the radio switch and clicked it off.

Lillian's face burned. The thrill of the dance burned her face... made her hair a mass of soft wire, which clung about her fingers as she turned to the bureau to pat it in place with her trembling hands.

Her eyes were very bright. They were filled with something Lillian had not seen in their blue-black depths before.

Maybe this was the spirit of New York. No, she thought, this is a little taste of real life... and a taste she never would have known had she stayed home.

Blane was there by her side. He was looking down at her, as if he wanted to take her into his arms.

Lillian watched him in the mirror. He turned and met her eyes in the mirror.

He was looking at her with a queer flicker in his eyes. Lillian turned to the window again.

"Blane—let's go out—I want to walk along Broadway. I've never been on Broadway at night..."

He followed her to the window.

He caught her hand. He said: "Tell me something—have you ever had a sweetheart?"

Lillian was surprised: "Why, Blane—after what I told you on the train... I told you I didn't."

"Oh—I know. I mean, I mean—have you ever been in love?"

"In love? Why—no, I don't think I really have—ever."

He crushed her hand. He lifted it to his lips and he turned the palm to his mouth.

She wanted to touch his hair, as his head bent over her hand. It seemed an obvious gesture, perhaps a little too sentimental. She had seen it done in plays, in the movies. The woman always touched the hair of the men who kissed their hands.

That was one thing she must not be with Blane—sentimental. She said: "Blane—you make me feel as if I were on the stage—already."

He lifted his face. He was flushed and his eyes were a little heavy.

There was that queer flicker in his eyes again—it was a sort of mocking amusement.

"Are you making fun of me?" he asked.

"Oh, Blane—"

"Why are you laughing?"

"I'm not—laughing."

"You are—listen to you!"

"He dropped her hand."

She pushed back against the facing of the window.

"Oh, I didn't mean to be laughing—at you. I—meant to tell you that when you kissed my hand I felt as if I might be—be Norma Talmadge, sure enough..."

She tried to be light, she smiled, but he didn't.

It seemed that her manner affected him unpleasantly. She was so awed by him she did not know just what to do or say just then.

She could not believe her ears. Could it be, that so suddenly he thought he cared for her... After all, it hadn't been just one-sided, this peculiar feeling she had about him... had ever since he sat there by the fire in her house and talked... and looked at her so... had said he had plans for her... plans for her happiness...

All the time he had intended plans for their happiness... their happiness together! It was almost too much for Lillian to comprehend. It was too much like a dream...

"Oh, Blane—" she gasped his name.

"Don't you know—can't you understand... what I feel for you..."

Lillian couldn't speak.

He was coming nearer. She knew he was holding out his arms to her, even though she couldn't look at him, somehow.

It was all so sudden. Why, she didn't know him. He didn't know her. Really. But it seemed that always they had known, always she had known that he would come to her, come and declare his love for her.

"Blane... you mean... you love me..."

She said that. Why should she ask him whether he loved her? That wasn't the thing she believed a girl would do, when she faced the man...

"Aren't you going to kiss me?" he demanded.

Lillian did not answer. She was suddenly afraid. She didn't know why.

"Blane—I—"

He reached for her. But she stepped out of his way. Somehow her hand found the light switch.

In the bright light Lillian saw, to her astonishment, that there was none of the sweetness in his eyes which she confidently had expected.

A beauty contest is staged at Atlantic City, the winner to be the bride of the candidate. But Wintergreen, as played by William Gaxton, falls in love with his secretary, Mary Turner, (Lois Moran) and Dina Devereaux, (Grace Brinkley), the winner of the contest, is fitted. Diana is French and so the French Ambassador, with a patriotic peeve, threatens war on the United States if the marriage doesn't go through. He marries his secretary however, and afterward she saves him from impeachment by announcing she is to become a mother. So they strangled the kidnapped king. Achmed ben Mohammed er Raisuli, better known as the Sherief Raisuli of Morocco, was probably the most famous kidnaper of our own time.

Raisuli was a descendant of the Prophet Mohammed but had small wealth and estate. He became a bandit, capturing wealthy Europeans and forcing their relatives to buy their releases. He also used these exploits as a means to force the Sultan of Morocco to restore his family lands as that monarch was in terror of the anger of Occidental nations.

In 1904 Raisuli kidnapped Ion Perdicaris, a naturalized American, and demanded a huge ransom. The late President Theodore Roosevelt effected Perdicaris' release by his famous ultimatum: "Perdicaris alive or Raisuli dead."

The sultan gladly paid the $70,000 demanded. He wanted no trouble with the United States.

KIDNAPING IS ANCIENT OFFENSE, BIBLE REVEALS

Famous Cases, From Joseph, As Told In Book Of Genesis, To Lindbergh, Show Possession Was First Motive; Now Money Is Object

men. Thus brigandage developed a relative, a savagely jealous uncle in Europe—and still exists in isolated areas.

The hapless sons in the Middle Ages were forced to produce the ransom monies for their captive Hege lord. This additional tax-

Kidnaping Caused War of 1812

The impressment of American sailors into British naval service in the first decade of the nineteenth century was one of the chief contributing causes of the War of 1812.

It was estimated that at least as many American sailors were kidnapped by British "press" gangs and forced to serve on British men-of-war as were actually in the service of their own country.

When the United States finally refused to permit this outrage any longer the war was declared, 2,000 kidnapped American seamen were placed in British prison ships because they refused to fight against their own country. In the treaty of peace which concluded the conflict the subject of kidnapping American sailors was not mentioned but never again did England attempt to abduct Yankee seamen.

Greatest Ransom a Failure

Undoubtedly the greatest ransom ever demanded and received by a kidnaper for the freedom of his captive was that exacted from a terrified Peruvian nation by Francisco Pizarro, the Spanish conquistador.

Through trickery Pizarro seized the person of King Atahualpa and demanded that he order his subjects to fill the kidnapped monarch's cell with gold to the height of his reach. An incredible treasure poured into that room, the Peruvians bringing even their sacred golden images to be added to ransom payment.

When Atahualpa had fulfilled his part of the bargain he demanded his release. The Spaniards, feasting their eyes on the vast store of gold, feared that if they released the king his subjects might drive them from the land and this magnificent mound of wealth, broke their word.

So they strangled the kidnapped king.

Achmed ben Mohammed er Ralsuli, better known as the Shereef Ralsuli of Morocco, was probably the most famous kidnaper of our own time.

Ralsuli was a descendant of the Prophet Mohammed but had small wealth and estate. He became a bandit, capturing wealthy Europeans and forcing their relatives to buy their releases.
